Sec. Tobin Puts Blame For Strike On Big Steel

Head of U. S. C. of C., In Radio Debate, Points to Murray's 'Impatience' to Talk

BULLETIN

Detroit, Oct. 30 (U.P.) — Chrysler Motor Corp. announced tonight it will halt virtually all production Friday because of depleted steel supplies.

A spokesman said all assembly operations except those at Plymouth and Dodge truck plants will be stopped.

By the United Press

Secretary of Labor Tobin yesterday asserted the responsibility for the crippling steel strike lies squarely on the big steel corporations because they refused to accept the pension recommendations of President Truman's fact-finding board.

Tobin bluntly blamed "Big Steel" for the shutdowns in a brisk radio debate with Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, over the National Broadcasting Company's "American Forum of the Air."

Steinkraus said in reply that the real cause of the strike is that CIO President Philip Murray is "too impatient" to "take a little time" to work out details of a fair pension program with management.

The steel strike enters its fifth week with the industry and Murray's Steelworkers still deadlocked on the question of company-financed pensions.

Federal Mediation Chief Cyrus S. Ching planned to continue conferences with officials of the major steel firms this week, and at the same time prepared for another try at ending the 42-day-old walkout by John L. Lewis' soft-coal miners.

Steinkraus said that the two big strikes are "closely linked" and suggested that "political rivalry"

Lewis Balked In Bid to Free Mine Funds

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis has been balked in his efforts to unfreeze nine million dollars in miners' welfare funds and use the money to continue cash benefits for emergency hospital and medical cases, it was learned yesterday.

At a recent secret meeting of the trustees of the United Mine Workers Welfare and Retirement Fund, the employers' trustee, Ezra Van Horn, and the neutral trustee, Senator Bridges (R., N.H.), turned down the proposal made by Lewis, the union trustee.

Welfare fund payments, which provided monthly benefits to nearly 400,000 ailing and retired soft-coal miners, their dependents, widows and orphans, were sus-

Band to Lead Red Feather Parade Today

Music of the Air Forces Band will lead a surprise parade today through downtown Washington with Community Chest campaign workers marching to the first report luncheon to disclose progress of the present drive for funds.

The parade will start at McPherson Square, 15th and 1 sts. nw., shortly before noon. It will move along 15th st., past Pennsylvania ave., to the Washington Hotel where the report luncheon will take place.

The parade will be the first of four processions to mark the succeeding report luncheons during the drive, and in line will be several hundred Chest drive workers, as well as representatives of the 102 Red Feather agencies supported by the annual single campaign.

Frank J. Luchs, general chairman of the campaign, was guardedly optimistic last night over reports from some business firms where solicitation has gone well over the top both of goals in the present campaign and of performance in past Chest campaigns.

But he warned against overoptimism in the drive and urged the army of Chest solicitors to expend every possible effort in contacting and convincing contributors of the need for success in achieving the Washington area goal of $3,991,719.

Cameron said he was not a Communist and had no connection with any political parties. His sister is secretary of the Socialist Medical Association.

Police Nab 2 Women, Male Pal

A 22-year-old woman, who allegedly held a gun, and two companions, a man and another woman, were charged yesterday with the early morning robbery of a hotel manager.

The three were captured after two alert scout car policemen picked up one of the women on the street and got a confession from her on the spot. Police said that all three were identified and that the 22-year-old and her male companion, arrested within minutes of the first pickup, also confessed.

The scout car officers were Pvts. Albert F. Mode and T. H. Carpenter, of the First Precinct.

Identified as Oysterman

The three arrested and charged with robbery are Margaret Hamilton, 22, who gave her address to police as 451 K st. nw.; Ruth Edna Maze, 39, of 825 5th st. nw.; and Frank V. Morris, 30, who was identified by police as an oysterman of Abell, Md.

Victim of the robbery was George Keishen, 65, night manager of the Palace Hotel, 1102 14th st. nw.

Keishen said yesterday that the trio walked into the hotel lobby at 3 a. m. He told police the woman later identified as Margaret Hamilton walked up to the desk and asked for a room. A moment later, he told officers, she pulled out a gun and told him, "Don't make any moves. I want all the money you've got."

He said he "thought she was kidding."

"'I'm not kidding,'" Keishen said the Hamilton woman replied. "'If you care for your life, then give me all the money you've got.'"

Keishen told officers he handed over $35, $12 of it his own. The Hamilton woman then directed Morris to cut phone wires, Keishen said, and Morris, instead, pulled them out.

"As If You Were My Sweetheart"

"She told me," Keishen said, 'Don't call for 10 minutes. Take us to the door.' I walked with them toward the door and they saw a young couple coming in. Then she said, 'Talk nice to me just as if you were my sweetheart,' and when they went out she called back 'So long. I'll see you again.'"

Keishen called police and gave them descriptions and said both women were wearing brightly colored clothing and head scarfs knotted as snoods.

Privates Mode and Carpenter heard the description on the radio.

Police said they learned later that the trio took a car in front of the hotel and "just drove around for awhile."

Barkley and Mrs. Hadley as they announced wedding plans

St. Louis, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Smiling and holding hands, Mrs. Carleton Hadley and Vice President Alben Barkley tonight announced they will be married November 18.

The Vice President, 71, let his bride-to-be, who is 38, do most of the talking.

He said they had told President Truman of their plans in a telephone call put through to Washington before they made the announcement at a press conference in Mrs. Hadley's comfortable little apartment.

They said Mr. Truman was very happy at the news.

Close friends of the President said at Washington he will attend the wedding if at all possible. There has been speculation he may be best man.

The wedding, Mrs. Hadley said, will be at St. Louis. Outside of that, she said, there were no other details arranged.

They said they hadn't made up their minds where to go on a honeymoon.

She didn't say so, but it was assumed she would quit her job as secretary to the general counsel of the Wabash Railway after the wedding.

Her late husband was general counsel for the railroad when he died five years ago.

The couple had dinner in the apartment tonight. On their date last night they attended a concert

Fair Deal Aims Color Lehman, Dulles Fight

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 30.—Sometimes the two candidates in New York's weird Senate race do get around to discussing main issues.

When they do, former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman plugs for the unenacted portion of the Truman "Fair Deal," with some modifications.

And Senator John Foster Dulles reduces it all to what it will cost in increased taxes.

As one wag put it, Lehman says: "All this you can have." And Dulles replies: "But you've got to pay this for it."

New Attitude Advised on A-Bomb Curbs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Russia's achievement of an atomic explosion increases the possibility, as well as the necessity, for international control of atomic energy. But to reach an agreement, the United States must make changes in its tactics and "attitude" in negotiating with the Russians.

These are the views of Chester I. Barnard, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, former industrialist and one of the members of the Board of Consultants which in 1946 produced the famous Acheson-Lilienthal report. That report became the basis for the plan for international atomic control now accepted by all countries in the U. N. but the Russian bloc.

Barnard's comments appeared in the November number of the magazine, Scientific American, issued today. But prepublication circulation of his article has already aroused considerable comment. Barnard is the first member of the Acheson-Lilienthal committee to analyze publicly the changed situation resulting from the Russian explosion.

Implicit in Barnard's article is the argument that the U. S. should reexamine its present stand in U. N. atomic discussions and get to work on new negotiations with the Russians on a new basis.

This view seems to contrast with

Navy Orders 77 Ships Out Of Service

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Navy announced last night it has ordered 77 ships, including 35 warships, retired from active service to meet expected cuts in funds.

All the larger vessels, which include five aircraft carriers and six cruisers, will be "mothballed" at Navy Yards. Some of the smaller ships will be turned over to Reserve units for training.

If the program is carried out as scheduled, the Navy will have 237 warships in service by July, 1950, instead of the 268 it had last September 1. The Atlantic Fleet will lose 12 percent of its present strength, while the Pacific Fleet will lose 9 percent.

The reductions were scheduled in response to the rigid economy drive ordered by Defense Secretary Johnson and their formal announcement was preceded by disclosure that the Navy and Marine Corps would lose 56,891 men by next July 1. This reduction in manpower was made necessary by the cutback in vessels in service.

Two of the five carriers to be laid up are the 27,000-ton Essex class Leyte and Kearsarge; the other three are light escort carriers. One heavy cruiser, the Macon, is to be mothballed. Among the lighter cruisers are two antiaircraft vessels. Three of the carriers will come from the Atlantic Fleet and two from the Pacific; four cruisers will come from the Atlantic Fleet and two from the Pacific.

In addition, 14 destroyers will be retired, eight from the Atlantic Fleet and six from the Pacific. Five of nine submarines will be taken from the Pacific Fleet and only four from the Atlantic.

These losses will be, in part, offset by returning to active service the light carrier Bataan and the submarine Guavina and commissioning two new subs, Grenadier and Grampus.

The remaining 42 ships to be retired include landing vessels, tankers, seaplane tenders, an attack transport and a hospital ship. A few light craft will be transferred to naval districts for reserve training.

The reduction in force will cut the number of active Essex class carriers from five to three, increase small carriers from three to four, and cut escort carriers from seven to four.

Here is a list of the ships scheduled for the inactive fleet; the fleet to which they are currently assigned; the time at which they will be put into the mothballing proc-

Curbs Sought To Bar Leaks In Arms Aid

By The Associated Press

Eight European allies come here this week for talks that may clamp basic agreements around America's billion-dollar arms aid program to insure the Atlantic area gets all the benefits.

Diplomatic authorities said the agreements will lay down at least four basic conditions designed to make certain the weapons go into strengthening over-all defenses of the Atlantic area and are not diverted to other purposes.

Many of the countries to receive military help from the United States are colonial powers and some, like France in Indochina, have heavy military commitments in those areas.

Under the interpretation placed on the proposed amendments by the State Department, the powers would not have the right to use the guns and other weapons they get through the arms program in colonial fighting.

The four basic conditions are these:

1. The weapons must be used to carry out the purposes for which Congress specifically authorized the arms programs — that is, building up integrated defenses of the Atlantic area.

2. None of the arms may be transferred to another country

Talks Open Here Today To Increase U. S. Imports

British, Canadians To Air Complaints About Red Tape, Recommend Changes

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Customs experts of the British and Canadian governments will sit down with American officials today to air their grievances about the red tape of American customs procedures and to suggest remedies.

Other foreign governments that want to earn more dollars here will have a similar opportunity soon. The United States intends to invite all of them to send experts to Washington, or to assign members of their embassy staffs, for frank face-to-face discussions of the customs problem.

Exporters abroad long have complained that American customs regulations hamper them unfairly in getting their goods into the American market. Officials here, on the other hand, think foreign exporters could spare themselves a lot of trouble if they had a clearer knowledge of American rules and of what they must do to comply with them.

The Treasury is now doing what it can to change the rules by administrative action, and is planning to ask Congress early in the next session to amend the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930, on which most of the present regulations are based.

The technical discussions starting today are an outgrowth of the "dollar talks" last month among American, British and Canadian Cabinet ministers. The three governments agreed, among other things, "to reduce obstacles to the entry of goods and services from debtor nations, in order to provide as wide an opportunity as possible for those countries to earn dollars."

Americans at the first meeting today will represent all government agencies concerned with imports into this country. Among them will be officials of the State, Commerce and Treasury Departments; the Economic Cooperation Administration, which is trying to promote European sales to the United States; and the Federal Security Agency, which administers the pure food and drug laws.

The British have sent three civil servants from their Board of Trade and Treasury, and the Canadians are expected to send a small group from Ottawa.

The Government here has no idea of confining its consultations

The average Government official is 52 years old, a college graduate, married with two children and likes to play golf.

He also is a veteran of World Wars I or II, has been in Federal service 14 years and comes from New York, California, Illinois or one of the other heavily populated States.

Those are the conclusions reached by the editors of "American Man in Government," a book just published by Public Affairs Press.

It said the youngest Government executive is 33 and the oldest 83 and that slightly more than 1 percent of the executives are women. About 53 percent hold law degrees.

Gardening is the favorite hobby, although the "outstanding popular pastime is golf." Fishing ranks next.

CBS Planning for Telecasts Of General Assembly at U. N.

New York, Oct. 30. — The United Nations' General Assembly sessions, both at Flushing Meadows and Lake Success, will be broadcast over the CBS television network, effective November 7, it was announced today by Carlos P. Romulo, president of the General Assembly.

The cost of presenting the programs is being assumed by the Ford Motor Co. as a public service. Two daily broadcast periods (generally Monday through Friday) from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 3 to 4 p. m. are planned. In announcing this arrangement, President Romulo said:

"Not as many people can visit Lake Success as would like to. Television provides a means of going to them, of multiplying by many times the hundreds of thousands of people who have already come to Lake Success.

"The Assembly has the function of discussion, exploration, and recommendation. It is a function which daily should be better understood by more and more people. It is by coming closer to one another, by speaking our minds and airing our problems that we can best hope to achieve understanding, peace, and beyond these, the vigorous cooperation which can lead us to a better world."

Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co., said: "Underwriting such a series, it seems to us, is underwriting better understanding of the great role the United Nations is playing in the lives of all of us. Better understanding cannot but advance the all-important cause of world peace and world cooperation."

Little Betty Pope will have a new bicycle after all.

Nine-year-old Betty of 8313 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, chewed up her winning ticket in excitement during a drawing for a bicycle at a Silver Spring movie house Saturday.

Her sad experience reported in The Washington Post was picked up by radio stations and press associations and sent throughout the country. It brought immediate response from people who remembered their own youthful wishes and those of their offspring.

And so yesterday, Betty's daddy, Thomas, a former Navy Department architect, laid off recently because of lack of seniority, received a telegram from Charles H. Parton, Ossining, N. Y., an official of the Rollfast Co.

"Betty will have a new bike sent her in a few days," the telegram promised.

Connie B. Gay, WARL hill-billy disc jockey, called The Washington Post to say that he has a daughter himself about the same age as Betty and—well—anytime Betty wants to go shopping with him she can pick out any bike she wants.

Another person called Mrs. Pope to say she was welcome to a bike which the caller's daughter had used until she grew up.

As for Betty: "Oh, I think it is fine. I don't care what color it is and I'm going to let my brother and sisters ride it, too—sometimes."

Truman Calls for Renewal Of Devotion to Religion

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

President Truman last night declared that "an active faith will sustain and guide us as we work for a just peace, freedom for all, and a world where human life is truly held sacred."

The President spoke from the White House on a Nation-wide radio broadcast opening a "Religion in American Life" campaign sponsored by 20 religious bodies, including the Federal Council of Churches and the Synagogue Council of America.

He urged a "renewed devotion" to religion by all Americans and warned that "if there is any danger to the religious life of our Nation, it lies in our taking our religious heritage too much for granted."

"Religion," he said, "is like freedom. We cannot take it for granted. Man—to be free—must work at it. And man—to be truly religious—must work at that, too."

"Unless men live by their faith, and practice that faith in their daily lives, religion cannot be a living force in the world today," Mr. Truman said.

Other nations of the world today look to the United States for leadership in the ways of peace, the President said.

"I am convinced that we are strong enough to meet the challenge," he continued. "We are strong enough because we have a profound religious faith. The basic source of our strength as a nation is spiritual," he declared.

"It is this faith that inspires us to work for a world in which life will be more worthwhile, a world of tolerance, unselfishness and brotherhood—a world that lives according to the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount," Mr. Truman said.

McCloy Selects 13 For His Cabinet

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—High Commissioner John J. McCloy skipped over professional diplomats in picking his 13-man "cabinet" of top advisers, made public today.

Despite the State Department's responsibility for American policy in occupied Germany, the list of McCloy's assistants includes only two career diplomats.

The armed forces, no longer concerned with occupation policy, are represented in four posts. The other seven were filled by two bankers, two attorneys, a publisher, a trade union executive and a former State Department man who put in two years with the military government here.

General Hays Is Deputy

The men who will help McCloy run Germany are

3 Pact Nations Start Defense Plans Today

London, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Defense Ministers of Britain, Norway and Denmark will meet Monday to start setting up the defense structure planned by the 12-nation North Atlantic Alliance.

The goal is a defense plan covering the region from North America to the Mediterranean Sea, and from the Tropic of Cancer to the North Pole.

The plan, broad outlines of which were drawn up by the Foreign Ministers of signatory states in Washington last summer, involves the formation of defense regions.

The three states at Monday's meeting will comprise the northern region.

More Purges to Hold Line for Cominform Are Reported

By The Associated Press

Eastern Europe yesterday buzzed with rumors of arrests, purges and government shakeups aimed at tightening the Cominform line against the independent doctrines of the rebel Communist, Marshal Tito.

Many of the reports were unconfirmed.

Warsaw heard stories of the removal of at least three vice ministers from their posts because they were "politically unreliable."

There also were unofficial reports of the arrest of Josef Dubiel, a right-hand man to Wladislaw Gomulka, former vice premier who was demoted and thrown out of the Communist party leadership for "Titoism" last year.

A Bulgarian government decree relieved army chief of staff Ivan Kinov and the head of the army's political management division Boyan Bulgaranov from their duties.

The Yugoslav press printed the text of Saturday's Ministry of Interior announcement of the Hungarian attack on the Yugoslav border, but did not comment.

A view of Soviet Russia by Yugoslav Vice President Moshe Pijade, as quoted in a Belgrade interview of the Italian News agency Ansa: "It is difficult to say whether Russia is for war; one can only think that. I believe that all Soviet policy is dominated by internal political and economic difficulties. There is strong opposition to the regime in Russia today."

Reds Yank East German Price Props

Berlin, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—The Communists pulled price supports from under rationed goods in Eastern Germany today in an effort to stimulate trade in their Russian-style unrationed stores.

The Eastern government announced the canceling of subsidies that have kept prices of rationed foods, clothing and materials within the reach of the low wage earner. An immediate increase in food prices was freely forecast.

At the same time, the ration-free stores announced a broad cut in prices, ranging in some cases up to 60 per cent. Their rates have been much higher than those of the rationed stores.

The government will save 200 million East marks a year (about $8,500,000) by canceling the subsidies.

Parade Shows Military Might Of Czech Reds

Prague, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Czechoslovakia's Communist leaders reviewed today a two-hour parade of Czech military power which they have pledged to march with the Russians in any future war.

The parade was in celebration of the thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the Czechoslovak Republic. It was preceded by a march of thousands of workers into Prague's main square.

The flags of Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia flew side by side. The capital was plastered with huge pictures of Czechoslovakia's Communist President, Klement Gottwald, and Soviet Prime Minister Stalin. The celebration had been shifted from Friday to Sunday to save a working day.

Chilled thousands saw units of the army, the security police and the blue-clad workers' militia. Some tanks were included. Small formations of planes roared over the city.

Gottwald declared the political situation had improved with "new victories" this year.

He listed these as: "Establishment of a new people's democratic (Communist) republic in China, Russian development of the atom bomb which broke the American monopoly, and the establishment of the new German democratic government in Berlin."

Gottwald asserted Czechoslovakia's economic situation was improving with the derationing of various goods."

Asia Aid Proposal In Blueprint Stage

Paris, Oct. 30 (AP).—United States experts are working on preliminary blueprints of an aid plan for Asia, an American official disclosed today.

The early planning contemplates a request to Congress next summer for one billion dollars to $1,250,000,000 for the first year to help stop communism in Asia. Smaller requests would taper off the program in the next two or three years, just as it is intended to ease off Marshall Plan appropriations for Europe.

Discussion of an Asiatic plan coincides with an announcement from Manila by Philippine President Elpidio Quirino that a preliminary conference will be called in January or February to organize a non-Communist union of southeast Asian countries.

It comes, also, as the United States State Department is faced with the task of drawing a policy line on communism in Asia.

Chiefly in Southeast

The American informant, who preferred not to be identified, said present thinking is along the lines of aiding chiefly southeast Asia, where Chinese Communists are on the doorstep and where native Communist movements are taking on new courage. The experts would include some countries of the south Pacific, too.

They think these countries should be included in the invitations: India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and perhaps Indonesia and Viet-nam, the Indo-Chinese state recently given increased self-government by France.

By next summer the effectiveness of Viet-nam in weaning away nationalist support from Moscow-educated Ho Chi-minh in north Indo-China should be clearer. The status of the projected new United States of Indonesia, created from the islands of the Netherlands East Indies, also may be established.

By the time concrete planning is necessary, too, the question of Nationalist China may be cleared.

Basis Laid by Point 4

The basis for large-scale aid to Asia was laid by the now famous Point 4 in President Truman's inaugural address. It called for technical and financial aid to countries whose material development is not up to Western standards. Like the Marshall Plan, it calls for self-help, too.

Many of the dollars given to Asia, the official said, would also help meet Europe's dollar shortage. Although part of the dollars would be spent in the United States, others would go to Europe for goods to restore Asiatic industries and agricultural production.

It was such aid, the informant said, that ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman had in mind when he said the United States would have to spend about two billion dollars a year on foreign assistance after the end of the Marshall Plan in 1952. The statement was made in a speech at Philadelphia Wednesday.

Many Europeans believed he meant that Marshall aid to Europe would be continued under another name. American officials here are worried over this reaction and call it a false impression.

The informant said the groundwork is now being laid to shift the focus of American aid from Europe to Asia. He predicted the move would win support in Congress.

"A lot of Congressmen don't like Europeans," he said. "They want to do something for somebody else."

Harry Edwards (arrow) gets oxygen as rescuers work

Philadelphia, Oct. 30 (AP).—Rescued from a 15-foot-deep hole where he was buried alive for nearly an hour, 45-year-old Harry Edwards was reported recovering today at Frankford Hospital.

For a time Edwards was buried completely in the excavation and owed his life to the frantic digging of his son, Harvey, 19, who scooped earth from around his face permitting him to breathe.

A wall of earth collapsed suddenly on Edwards late yesterday as he was at work on a sewer trench.

The younger Edwards, freed himself quickly and tore at the mounds of earth surrounding his father.

Police and firemen hustled to the scene and went to work shoveling.

Nationalists In Red Trap

Hongkong, Oct. 30 (UP).—Thousands of Chinese Nationalists were reported trapped on Luichow Peninsula between Communist armies and the sea today, dependent on a Dunkirk operation to save them from capture or annihilation.

Luichow Peninsula, some 200 miles southwest of Canton, points southward from the southern tip of Kwangtung province toward Hainan Island, to which other thousands of government troops and their generals already have fled.

The troops, under Gen. Liu Anchi, have been ambushed repeatedly along the narrow coastal highway leading to Luichow.

The shallow 13-mile-wide straits to Hainan Island was swarming with junks and makeshift craft ferrying the Nationalists to safety. But Nationalist military sources admitted that remaining government troops in the south faced disaster.

Americans Tiring of Aid To Europe, Senator Asserts

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 30 (AP)—Sen. Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said today the American people are "getting tired of aiding Europe."

The Senator spoke at a news conference held by members of the Armed Services subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. The Senators are on a fact-finding tour of Marshall Plan countries.

Thomas commented that "if we could be convinced that we are doing good we would go back and tell our people that we must continue (Marshall aid)."

"The American people are bored by taxes. They want to know how long they must continue to pay.

"We have seen splendid steps towards recovery in the countries we have been through (France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Scandinavia). The impression has been excellent."

Another Senator spoke up: "We would not put a price tag on freedom, but our resources are not unlimited. . . . We want to see if the peoples in western Europe are industrious."

The Senators leave Tuesday for Frankfurt, Germany, whence they go to Berlin, Switzerland, Italy, Madrid and the Middle East.

Reds Shift Top Envoys To Strengthen Position

London, Oct. 30 (UP)—The Iron Curtain countries are trying to strengthen their crumbling position in Scandinavia and Finland by a series of important shifts in diplomatic envoys, well-informed sources said today.

In the past three weeks Russia has named a new Ambassador to Sweden. Hungary has recalled its Minister to Sweden, informants said, and Hungary and Bulgaria have named new Minister to Finland. It is reported also that the staffs of the Czechoslovak and Polish missions to the Scandinavian countries have been purged.

without consent of the American Government.

3. Each recipient must agree to protect the secrets of American weapons it gets.

4. Each nation must reaffirm its commitment to furnish whatever assistance it may be capable of giving other nations in the Atlantic defense system.

President Truman signed the $1,314,010,000 arms appropriation bill Friday. In addition to the billion dollars for the Western European countries, the bill carries funds for Greece and Turkey, Iran, Korea and the Philippines, and for combating communism in the China area.

to Britain and Canada. Many European countries, notably the Netherlands, France, Italy and Sweden, are making ambitious plans to sell more goods in the United States and are bothered almost as much by American customs rules as by high American tariff rates.

The Dutch recently submitted a long list of complaints and suggestions to an ECA committee that studied the problem of imports into the United States. The committee, headed by Wayne C. Taylor, reported that "the task of bringing goods into the United States market is frequently made difficult by antiquated and in some cases inequitable customs procedures."

Some countries outside the Marshall Plan organization are just as anxious as the Europeans to sell more goods here and to ease their shortage of dollars. Among them are Australia, India, Egypt, South Africa and the Philippines.

To Seek Local Cooperation

Present plans do not call for a full-fledged conference of many nations, but rather for a series of bilateral technical talks. American officials not only will listen to complaints, but will have practical suggestions of their own for speeding the clearance of foreign goods here.

The Bureau of Customs already is working on a booklet to tell foreign exporters about American regulations, including the pure food and drug laws that keep misbranded or substandard food products out of the country.

The ECA will be asked to translate, print and distribute this booklet abroad with the help of local currency funds in each Marshall Plan country. But the cooperation of foreign governments will be needed, and the American officials will ask for it.

Dollar "Crisis" Studied

Meanwhile American, British and Canadian officials are following up the ministers' decisions last month by studying various ways of boosting Britain's dollar earnings.

The outcry from France last month was so loud, and there was so much suspicion that an exclusive American-British-Canadian "club" was being formed, that the three countries have been careful not to set up a formal organization to carry on these studies.

Instead, the British are sending Sir Leslie Rowlan, one of their top-notch civil servants, to join the Embassy staff here as a top-level economic counselor. The Canadians are considering sending Sydney Pierce, their Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, on a similar permanent assignment to Washington, although they have not yet decided who their emissary will be.

On the American side the three-power discussions, which may last for more than a year, will be directed by Henry R. Labouisse, jr., of the State Department.

Since the ministers of the three countries met last month, the U. S. has taken these steps to ease the British dollar shortage:

1. The ECA has made 175 million dollars available to the British for buying wheat in Canada and has agreed to pay harbor charges for shipping amounting to about 30 million dollars a year.

Rubber Order Issued

2. The Department of Commerce has issued an order increasing the proportion of natural rubber, as against synthetic, that American manufacturers can use.

3. The State and Interior Departments and other agencies have begun to examine the international oil problem with British experts to see whether the British can save some of the 700 million dollars they are spending each year on petroleum and petroleum products.

4. President Truman is expected to give legal effect within a few weeks to the first of the new tariff reductions agreed on at Annecy, France, last summer, and

5. ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman may soon propose the creation of joint merchandising councils through which the United States will help promote the sale of European goods in the United States.

Cardinal Improved

Vatican City, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The condition of Francesco Cardinal Marmaggi, 73, who has been critically ill since suffering a heart attack Friday, was improved tonight, his secretary said.

that mention of this specific date might be politically inexpedient, since failure to meet the deadline would prove extremely embarrassing.

It is believed the Americans will impress privately on the Europeans the desirability of coming as close as possible to that goal. The principal reason is that Hoffman must go to a reluctant Congress early next year for further Marshall Plan funds, and his task will be difficult, if not impossible, unless he can produce a Western European economic unification project.

The eight-minister consultative group of the OEEC Council decided to postpone discussions it has been holding for the past three days. Today, the group broke up after only an hour. It will meet again late Monday afternoon after hearing from the ECA head.

So far, the group has taken one important step by agreeing to recommend that the OEEC Council set a standard and a deadline for abolition by OEEC members of their quotas on imports from other member states.

The recommendation is a watered-down version of a proposal by Sir Stafford Cripps that all members free at least 50 percent of such imports from quantative restrictions by a certain date next year. Observers at the closed meeting said the paper approved by the group "takes the general line" of Sir Stafford's plan without being specific on either amount or time.

Still to be acted on by the consultative group are proposals from France, Italy and Ireland. French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche Saturday called for promotion of currency convertibility at least among regional groupings of countries and for discussion of ways to coordinate investment programs among OEEC members.

Roberto Tremolloni, Italian minister of the OEEC, today asked for liberalization of labor migration. The Italians feel restrictions against the movement of labor are just as damaging to European recovery as trade barriers.

French Cabinet Held Lacking in Strength

By Theodore H. White

Paris, Oct. 30 (ONA)—Few observers in Paris consider the new government of Georges Bidault, pieced together with such difficulty after a 22-day crisis, to be strong enough to meet the major storms that lie just ahead in French affairs.

The Queuille Cabinet fell October 6 in a dispute over fringe labor demands. But labor already had achieved its main—and most explosive point: agreement of all parties that wages be unfrozen to let unions win what raises they can in free bargaining with employers.

Premier Bidault has proposed a single-payment cost-of-living bonus to workers in the lowest wage brackets. Jules Moch, Socialist, who remains as Minister of the Interior with the added portfolio of Vice Premier, had promised as much, but failed to form a government, while Rene Mayer, Radical, who now becomes Minister of Justice, also had made that minimum concession with no better luck.

Coalition's Base Split

The National Assembly is expected to liquidate wage-fixing regulations in a few weeks. A month or two thereafter, labor should either be getting its raises or launching the series of strikes that many here believe will stir again all elements of French politics.

The elements of these politics are as simple, yet as confusing, now as they were in 1946 when, in their first postwar National Assembly, the French chose a majority of deputies who believed in a socialist or welfare state. That majority—of Socialists, Popular Republicans (MRP) and Communists—had behind it the total support of the French working class.

When, in 1947, the struggle between Russia and the United States split this political majority, it split its working-class base also. Since the end of 1947, the Communists have mechanically controlled the key positions of trade-union power and Socialists-MRP have controlled the keys of political power. But both were wounded grievously.

On the labor front, the unions now are bunched in three weak groups—the Communist-led CGT counts 2,700,000, the Socialist-led CGT-FO counts 700,000, and the Catholic-led CFTC counts 700,000, according to the best neutral estimates.

Most Not in Unions

But the great majority of France's 11 million wage earners stand sullenly and cynically outside all trade unions. Under Communist leadership and for political purposes, last year's coal strike was pushed to the point of disaster.

The Socialists and MRP have found it impossible to govern without the votes of three or four right-wing pocket-parties speaking for peasant and business interests. To hold these votes they have step-by-step diluted their programs and principles to create the present schizophrenic coalition with its two faces and divided social loyalties.

This coalition's basic domestic policy has been to fight inflation. Everyone in France—worker, statesman, businessman—justifiably fears inflation. But the coalition program has included only a stab at budget-balancing, which now appears unsuccessful, the decontrol of business, which has been very successful, and the freezing of wages and salaries against which the unions now are in roaring revolt.

It is a footnote to French political-economics that there is no commonly accepted cost-of-living index that can form the basis of talks among all political groups.

Such figures as exist show that although kitchen utensils and meat are down (pork 65 cents a pound last year to 50 cents this year), rent, shoes, clothes, vegetables are up dramatically (cabbage from 16 to 39 francs a kilo, potatoes from 11 to 15 francs a kilo). Thus the right-wing members of the coalition feel that the worker has not been hurt badly enough to open the whole wage-scale, while the Socialists feel he has had his real wages cut from 8 to 15 percent in a year of prosperity.

Sullen, Envious Mood

Whatever the figures show, no one doubts that the worker is in a sullen, envious mood. French production is statistically way up, and the physical evidence shows in Paris opulence. Paris traffic seems to have clotted as badly as mid-Manhattan's in a single year as an estimated 100,000 cars were added to the previous total of 200,000.

The people who drive these cars through downtown Paris are once again immaculately and stylishly dressed and an affront to the thousands of French workers, who have seen no such rise in living standards in their own neighborhood.

The French workers are ready, therefore, to act. The trouble is they do not know just where and under whose leadership, and the union world is therefore full of maneuvering, contracts, deals and conversations to see who will benefit by the pressure that will be let loose.

The CGT has learned much from last year's strike, when their blatant Communist political orientation soured so many thousand stalwarts. This year they are plugging a strictly bread-and-butter line and making unity with their rivals the order of the day.

The CGT has done everything possible to win a united front on the national level with the Catholics and Socialists—but although the Catholics accepted, the Socialists refused and the deal fell through.

Employers' Action a Factor

Nevertheless, on a shop level their campaign for coordination in local action and local strikes is in full swing and, given enough resistance from employers, should result in a kind of action they have been unable to win so far.

The Bidault Cabinet rests on a slim compromise whereby the lowest paid workers are given a marginal bonus to tide them over until the unions win wage benefits. If, miraculously, all employers should peacefully give the unions wage increases, without raising prices, it could, perhaps, last six or eight months.

Few think this will happen and in a situation with so many variables no man will make any prediction except to say that France faces an uncertain autumn.

3-Week Test

Task Fleet To Dare Subs In Atlantic

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—A powerful task fleet of almost 100 fighting ships massed here today for the start of a three-week test of the Navy's antisubmarine defenses in the North Atlantic.

Led by the 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, Vice Admiral D. B. Duncan's Second Task Fleet will put to sea Monday Morning with some 42,000 officers and men and will "fight" its way northward through a series of mock battles extending up to the Arctic Circle.

The "cold war" battle plan calls for a pack of submarines to intercept the surface force early Tuesday off the Virginia Capes. For the next four days, the subs will carry out a running attack along a 1000-mile arc ranging up to the southern coast of Newfoundland.

Duncan, directing the maneuvers from aboard the FDR, will launch an air-sea counterattack spearheaded by bombers, fighters and reconnaissance planes from his flagship and the carriers Midway, Mindoro, Siboney and Wright.

More than 40 destroyers, destroyer escorts and mine sweepers, backed by four cruisers, will join in the antisub operation.

At the close of the first phase of the attack Friday night, Duncan will refuel and rearm the fleet at sea, after which the submarines will close in again for a second attack November 8 and 9 along a 100-mile-wide corridor northeast of Newfoundland.

Loyal Knights to Mark Bible Society Day

American Bible Society Day will be observed by the Loyal Knights of the Round Table at their luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Friday in the Washington Hotel.

Dr. Robert T. Taylor, general secretary of the American Bible Society, New York, will speak. The Rev. Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, pastor of National Presbyterian Church, will give the invocation and the Rev. Dr. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church and president of the Washington Ministerial Union, the benediction.

Baruch Sees No Atom Bomb Defense Plan

By The Associated Press

Bernard Baruch says that if a modern, push-button war with the dropping of atom bombs should occur, "there is no preparation or understanding" in this country "of what citizens can do to help or protect themselves."

"Nor is there any industrial mobilization plan except on paper," Baruch said.

A former presidential adviser, Baruch expressed his views in a letter to Rep. Kennedy (D., Mass), who made it public yesterday. Kennedy has been critical of the current state of the Nation's civil defense planning.

Superhighway Network for U. S. Defense Advocated by VFW

The security committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars yesterday advocated a system of superhighways connecting all sections of the Nation as a second line of national defense.

The security committee, Robert K. Christenberry, New York, chairman, and the legislative committee, headed by Adrian J. Grobsmith, Syracuse, N. Y., concluded a two-day session yesterday at the Mayflower and Statler, respectively.

A program for construction of these superhighways should be in readiness in case of a business recession, to serve as a work project the committee said.

The traffic arteries, which would be toll roads, according to the resolution, would be turned over to the military in a national emergency.

Also indorsed was a congressional resolution introduced by Representative Gordon L. McDonough (R., Calif.) calling on the Secretary of Defense to investigate plans for development of underground garages throughout the Nation, equipped with supplies which could be used by civil defense authorities.

The committee, which advocated outlawing the Communist Party, has proposed the placing of "trusted" veterans in key defense plants under FBI direction to guard against subversive activities and sabotage.

Slight Business Dip Forecast by U. S.

By The Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics last night said "a further slight reduction in economic activity and a relatively slow decline in prices appear likely."

The bureau, making its annual forecast of business conditions for the year ahead, explained its survey does not take into account things that can't be appraised at this time, such as the effect of unforeseen international developments or prolonged strikes.

In a report yesterday, the bureau tossed in the observation that a number of factors would help maintain "fairly high economic activity" next year, despite the probable small downdrift.

Its more detailed predictions included:

Consumer spending may slacken further as backlog demands for automobiles are reduced.

Employment will dip slightly.

Both farm prices and cash receipts may drop another 10 percent, with net farm income declining more as production costs stay high.

Business spending for new plants and equipment will be further cut in 1950, perhaps substantially from current levels.

The effect of devaluation on United States foreign trade is likely to be mildly depressing.

The home-construction boom, supplemented by increasing public housing, is expected to continue near this year's level.

Distribution of almost three billion dollars in veterans' insurance refunds—anticipated for the first half of the year—will tend to maintain consumer spending.

The proportion of consumer spending for food may decline further. A smaller portion is being spent for food this year than last and during the war. But it still is larger than before the war.

Government spending is expected to increase through at least the first half of the year, though at a slower rate than this year. A tapering off is indicated in the latter part of the year.

Crop production is likely to be down significantly. The Government is setting up new production controls to hold down surpluses.

Spending by State and local governments for school, highway and other improvements is likely to increase, but at a slower rate.

'Fair Deal' Objectives Provide Lehman And Dulles With Additional Campaign Fire

isn't much doubt what New York's common folk would choose.

But stemming from at least two of the Truman proposals are religious and medical profession defections that root deep in the State of New York.

They are (1) Federal aid to education, involved in a continuing religious controversy by the House Barden bill and (2) health insurance, opposed by a large number of medicos as "socialized medicine."

On how these and other so-called "hidden issues" cut may hinge the outcome of this election on November 8.

Both candidates have made their positions quite plain on these two Truman planks. Dulles says "no" to both Federal aid to education and compulsory health insurance.

Lehman has taken this modified stand:

Federal aid to education—Lehman is strong for it but opposes the House-blocked Barden bill because it would bar Federal aid to parochial schools. He favors the Senate-passed bill which lets the States decide where the funds should go and "involves no discrimination."

Compulsory health insurance—Lehman is opposed to "socialized medicine" but thinks everyone should have adequate medical service at reasonable cost. He says this can be worked out by a "partnership" between the medical profession, strengthened voluntary plans and the Government.

The Federal aid to education issue in giving New York Democrats serious cause for concern. Privately they will tell you they are more worried about the Catholic vote than any other single factor in this election.

Weeks ago, Lehman championed Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt against Cardinal Spellman's accusation of intolerance against Catholics on the Federal aid to education issue.

Those differences were later smoothed over and there is no present indication of top-level church opposition to Lehman.

What Democratic leaders fear is that some Catholic voters on the parish level may still harbor some feeling in the matter. It is an X-quantity not discussed here on the public platform. The question is how deep it goes.

Similar feeling was manifest when Lehman as Governor in 1935 vetoed a "bus" bill providing free transportation to both private and parochial schools on State constitutional grounds. He signed a subsequent bill but this was held unconstitutional by the State Court of Appeals. Lehman supported an amendment to the State constitution and helped give the State the law it now has making no discrimination in school transportation facilities. But some remember only that original veto.

On the second Truman point, compulsory health insurance, there is evidence all over the State of some medical profession activity for Dulles despite Lehman's announced stand against "socialized medicine."

How much of this is being organized by doctors who are active Republicans themselves, and how much is independent of party, is hard to determine. Frequently during his upstate bus tours Dulles has stopped to confer with physicians and dentists organized in his behalf.

Patients, too, are being circularized in many sections of the State. Here is a sample form letter sent out by one physician in Westchester County:

"My Dear Patient:

"I wonder if you know about the threat which exists today against the kind of care I have been able to give my patients.

"The National Administration has a plan for compulsory sickness insurance, which is the entering wedge of the socialized state. This would put politics into medicine and destroy the doctor-patient relationship so necessary to good medical care.

"Administration leaders in Washington say they intend to press their political medicine program next year.

"Socialized, political medicine is wrong. I want you to know that United States Senator John Foster Dulles has consistently and firmly opposed compulsory sickness insurance.

"His opponent on the other hand, has said that he will support the whole Administration program. Now, he also says that he believes the Federal Government must become a partner in providing medical care for the great majority of our people. Doctors believe that it is socialized medicine.

"You and your family will be far better off under voluntary plans for low-cost, high-standard medical services, with complete freedom to choose your own doctor.

"Because this is so important, I ask you as a personal favor to vote on November 8 for Senator John Foster Dulles and to get your family and friends to vote for him, too.

"Sincerely yours,

"(Signed)"

Held in Slaying Of Fur Merchant

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
PATSY ROGERS
. . . didn't want "loving"

Los Angeles, Oct. 30 (AP)—Patsy Rogers, 25 switchboard operator, was booked today on suspicion of murder in the slaying yesterday of furrier Harry Lapides, 71.

Police quoted her as saying in a signed statement that she emptied an automatic into Lapides' body because he "wanted some loving."

She said she had known the furrier a year and a half and that he had been trying to sell her a coat.

"When I went to the shop he said he wanted some loving," she was quoted. "I told him, 'All right, I'll give you some loving.' and I pulled out the gun and shot him."

Lapides' body, the heart pierced by five bullets, was found late yesterday afternoon beneath a pile of fur coats in his Hollywood store.

A woman wearing a fur coat was seen leaving the store about 2 p. m.

New Attitude on A-Bomb Curbs Advised

that expressed last week in New York by President Truman. He indicated that the U. S. was standing fast by the so-called Baruch plan for international control until a better plan—presumably suggested by someone other than the U. S.—came along.

The Russiass, meanwhile, have demanded in discussions among members of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, that the Americans produce a new proposal, in view of the fundamental change in the situation caused by the Russian bomb.

Barnard's article is so carefully and cautiously worded that considerable reading between the lines is required, a process that always permits misreading. But it appears to support the thesis that the United States come up with a fundamentally new look at the problem.

The basic premise of past negotiations, the American monopoly of the atom bomb and of its technology, Barnard declares, is now changed. This is a good thing, and measurably improves the chances for successful negotiation. For, he says, the principal parties to the discussions lacked the equality of status that makes for success in bargaining.

"One man with a gun finds it hard not to assume a superiority which hampers negotiation. Two men with guns are not necessarily going to shoot it out," Barnard writes.

Signs of High-Hat Complex

Barnard implies that that American superiority has made it "easy for us to offend" in past negotiations. He mentions that America has "more than once shown evidences of a high-hat complex."

Under the new circumstances, he argues, "there will have to be some changes in our tactics and our attitude."

Specifically, he feels that the question of "stages" has a "reduced significance." The term related to the step-by-step process in which each nation would deliver over to a new supra-national authority elements of atomic control, materials, plants, know-how, data on supplies of ores and materials, secret information, etc., before America would relinquish its stockpile of atom bombs.

Second, Barnard urges less emphasis on the question of the veto. In his lone major addition to the proposals in the Acheson-Lilienthal report, the first American delegate to the U. N. Atomic Commission, Bernard M. Baruch, insisted that no nation have the right to veto a proposed inquiry into, or punishment of, a violation of an international atomic agreement. The Russians vigorously resisted the idea of abandoning the veto in U. N. affairs.

No Cogent Connection

Barnard states that "the entire veto problem has no cogent connection . . . with the central question at issue . . .

"If some nation violates an international (atomic) agreement, others are not going to wait the months and months which may be required for the (U. N.) Security Council to complete a thorough investigation.

"If under these conditions a violation should occur, to all intents and purposes war would already have been declared. The veto would then be irrelevant; all rules would be off."

Barnard points out that though the Russian bomb makes the United States more vulnerable, it renders Russia no less vulnerable. To both sides, then, the necessity of control and of elimnation of atom bombs as weapons in war is overwhelming.

"The stakes are enormously high. In my opinion they involve not only peace but whether we shall be forced to have a totalitarian government. The defense measures that would be absolutely necessary in the event of a protracted failure to get international agreement would mean an intolerable central management of our lives. Such control has already progressed to the point where it threatens the freedom of science."

But Barnard feels the chances for agreement are better because of the danger to both sides of non-agreement and the more nearly equal status of the negotiators.

"The Soviet Union now feels itself in a happier position," Barnard states. In addition, "Although each nation now possesses the crucial weapon of attack, it has less direct incentive to use it—since it is an axiom of warfare that attack calls for retaliation."

The writer concludes:

"It is always a good thing not to assume too early that a situation is entirely hopeless. Four or five years ago the chance of achieving successful international control seemed to me about one in 100.

"Now it is perhaps one in 50, and it may get better as time goes on."

Humphrey Urges Delay in Health Plan

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), a sponsor of President Truman's national health insurance program, said last night that Congress must defer action on it pending further study and until enactment of related health measures.

The Senator said he always has believed in the social security principal of the proposed insurance program. But he added that until the "practical difficulties" of administering the hotly disputed plan have been met, "legislative action might well be a disservice to the principle in which we believe."

Humphrey indicated he expects no final congressional action on the bill next year. He thus lined up with two other sponsors of the measure who look for it to stay on the shelf through 1950. They are Senators Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) and Murray (D., Mont.)

Humphrey set forth his views in a statement which is known to have been prompted by reports he was withdrawing his support from Mr. Truman's health insurance program.

That program calls for bringing about 120,000,000 Americans under an insurance plan which the sponsors estimate would cost about 6 billion dollars a year.

Doctor Urges Mass Testing For Many Ills

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Public health departments might well give the public examinations for all readily detectable diseases from syphilis to deafness, a Public Health Service scientist advised yesterday.

The one-sitting exams could include tests for any or all of such ills as syphilis, diabetes, glaucoma, anemia, tuberculosis, obesity, faulty vision, hearing loss, high blood pressure and heart disease, he recommended.

Dr. A. L. Chapman, chief of the division of chronic diseases, made the recommendation as a cheap alternative to mass screening drives for each specific disease.

He urged adoption of such programs in an article on "The Concept of Multiphasic Screening" in the current issue of Public Health Reports, weekly Public Health Service publication for State and other health officers.

Using national averages on the 10 diseases and physical defects, Dr. Chapman said that for each 1000 persons screened some 976 cases would be uncovered. It doesn't follow, he added, that that number of persons would be afflicted, since many might have two or more of the conditions.

A breakdown of the ills, he said, might include: Syphilis, 48 cases; diabetes, 22; glaucoma (eye condition that may lead to blindness), 20; anemia, 75; tuberculosis, 18; obesity, 200; vision defect, 266; partial hearing loss, 250; high blood pressure, 38, and heart disease, 39.

For those health departments where money, personnel and facilities are too limited for such a battery of tests, Dr. Chapman advised, screening programs might include only those uncoverable by blood tests, such as syphilis, diabetes and anemia.

Where X-ray equipment and technicians are handy, the screening tests could include those for tuberculosis, heart disease and lung conditions. And for fully staffed, well-equipped departments tests for the others could be added, he said.

Such all-purpose screening interviews, Dr. Chapman emphasized, could not uncover every case of disease for which the tests would be given. They would screen out, however, thousands of conditions that might not otherwise be found, he said.

Physicians, he argued, would benefit in that patients would be referred to them at a time when ailments would respond to treatment more readily.

Cancer Clinic To Begin Night Tests Thursday

The Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic will begin night examinations this week for cancer-fearful persons unable to schedule daytime tests.

The night service, said Dr. Calvin Klopp, clinic director, is limited to those families that would suffer wage loss, mothers unable to pay for sitters, and comparable hardship cases. It will not include Federal employes who can take time off through annual leave.

Such restrictions are necessary, Dr. Klopp said, because the clinic's physicians, nurses and secretaries have volunteered their time without pay for the special cause.

First of the night cancer clinics will be held Thursday, beginning at 7 p. m. Appointments may be made by telephoning ST. 7800 between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The Thursday night clinics, to be held weekly, are for persons who feel they have definite symptoms of cancer, and not for the healthy who seek precautionary detection tests. Charges will be the same as for daytime diagnostic service, which are determined by the patient's ability to pay.

The Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic is affiliated with George Washington University and the university's new hospital at Washington Circle. It was founded in 1938 on funds left by the late Randolph T. Warwick. In April, 1948, largely on Federal funds and grants from the American Cancer Society, the clinic was enlarged to include cancer detection services.

Wonder Drug May Be Dairy Money Saver

Aureomycin, the golden drug for so many human ills, may prove itself to be a special money saver for the Nation's dairymen.

The wonder drug of 1949 for human medicine has been tested and found "highly effective" in treating the most costly disease of the dairy industry, mastitis, it was announced yesterday.

Mastitis is the inflammation of the milk-producing organs of the cow, and is said to affect about one-third of the Nation's 30 million dairy cows each year. It lowers the milk yield, makes much of the milk unsalable, and occasionally ends in blood-poisoning death of the animal.

Estimates of the annual economic loss to the dairy industry as a result of matitis range as high as 100 million dollars.

Yesterday, the drug makers, Lederle Laboratories, announced completion of exhaustive field tests of cows afflicted with mastitis. The drug, they said, was found to clear up staphylococal mastitis at a cure rate of 70 percent, and streptococcal mastitis in 90 percent of the cows treated.

The drug, laboratory officials said, will be made available immediately to the industry in ointment form in specially designed tubes for direct infusion into the udders of infected cows.

Helping Ourselves

The Community Chest campaign which opened in the Washington area last week is a test of principle. The principle is that charity begins at home—that the support of our own sick and needy is the foundation for all other giving. The test is whether the combined form of community giving, in which one campaign serves for 102 separate welfare agencies, is to survive as the most efficient and inexpensive method of meeting the need. The answer lies in how deeply every resident of the Washington area recognizes an individual responsibility, a responsibility that belongs, not to some far-off and abstract "they," but to every one of us.

Washingtonians who do their share this year can have confidence that a really conscientious effort has been made to eliminate weaknesses in Chest operation. Expert studies have been made; public representatives have had their say. The Chest organization has been streamlined to insure sound, integrated budgetary management at the minimum administrative cost. Young men of imagination are directing the campaign and are devoting much of their time in acquainting every segment of the community with the job to be done.

The immediate objective is to reverse both the failure and the psychology of failure that have afflicted Chest drives in recent years. To this end compromises have been inevitable, and some agencies are slated to receive less than they actually need. That is why the goal of just under four million dollars is an irreducible minimum. For anyone to deny an adequate gift to the composite of Chest agencies because of an objection to one or two individual members is to cut off one's hand because of a wart on one's finger.

Washington's pro rata share of the cost of the European Recovery Plan this year is nearly 10 times the Community Chest goal. That is a fact to remember in thinking of the reasons, not why we can't succeed, but why we must.

Task For The OEEC

The ECA program has succeeded admirably in building up the productive power of the aided countries. But it has not succeeded in bringing about a more closely integrated European economy or in laying the foundation for a healthy revival of inter-European trade. That is the chief cause of a growing congressional disaffection toward the program that may lead to crippling reductions in ECA appropriations or premature withdrawal of aid.

Consequently, the Council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, which convenes today in Paris, will be under pressure from Administrator Hoffman and other ECA officials to formulate a program for the liberalization of inter-European trade, especially removal of restrictive import quotas. Mr. Hoffman is also said to favor the creation of a regional monetary union, including France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. In any case, he is expected to emphasize the urgent need for an expansion of freer trading areas, within which the currencies of trading nations would be freely accepted in exchange for goods.

This is a large order that will be difficult to fill for political as well as economic reasons. Some ECA countries, Belgium, for instance, are much farther along the road to fiscal and currency stability than others. Some are politically insecure, notably France, and may not be able to enforce policies that are essential to maintenance of economic stability. Nevertheless, the success of the recovery program depends upon the willingness of western European countries to remove obstacles to freer trade. That will entail subordination of nationalistic ambitions and sacrifices on the part of the economically stronger nations. But in the long run the stronger and the weaker alike would lose more than they could gain by refusing to cooperate. The risks involved in removing protective trade barriers and making western European currencies convertible for purposes of inter-European trade must be taken if the ECA program is to provide a basis for permanent recovery and to emancipate Europe from dependence on dollar aid.

The introduction of a limited kind of convertibility within the European trading area would of itself greatly facilitate expansion of European trade and reduce the need for dollar imports. It would also prepare the way for a gradual extension of convertibility to other areas and hasten the day when full convertibility will be feasible. When that day arrives, and the currencies of ECA countries become generally acceptable as a means of international payment, the problem of balancing Europe's trading account with the United States will be much less difficult. For then the proceeds of European exports, wherever shipped, could be exchanged for dollars. As it is, extraordinary efforts are required of deficit nations to increase their exports to the United States, instead of concentrating their efforts, as they normally would, on increasing their over-all export trade.

Frozen Air Force Fund

President Truman's order freezing the 615 million dollars appropriated by Congress to give the Air Force 10 additional groups has created some indignation among Congressmen. But we suspect that it will meet with widespread approval by members of Congress and others who are keenly alert to our national defense problem. The House voted for an Air Force of 58 groups in defiance of the Administration's well-reasoned argument that 48 groups are enough to meet our present defense requirements. The indications are that the Senate yielded to the demands of the House partly because it assumed that the President would not spend the extra funds anyway.

The simple fact is that the President has acted to preserve the balance of our armed forces. The issue was clearly drawn in the recent testimony of General Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, before the House Armed Services Committee. "Our greatest danger," he said, "is that we will be caught up in the fancy of a futurism, and commit ourselves to unbalanced forces that will not match the forces which might oppose us." He was not, of course, speaking about an equal division of funds among the three services, although the cash expenditures authorized in the military supply bill come close to being split into thirds. Rather, he was cautioning against the expansion of one unit of the service in disregard of the others and against commitments that would soon "tower over us in burdensome upkeep."

President Truman has reemphasized these points. If the Air Force should be overextended, Congress would either have to expand the Army and Navy accordingly or maintain a lopsided defense system. In effect the President is saying to Congress: "You acted hastily on this matter in the adjournment rush. I don't believe you weighed the powerful arguments for maintenance of the balance that the best military minds of my Administration have recommended. Consequently, I am going to hold up this fund (which cannot be spent in the present fiscal year anyway) and let you consider the problem again next year." This sensible attitude could be criticized on policy grounds only if the country were faced by a grave military threat.

The curtailment of the Air Force appropriation has the added virtue of taking some of the heat off the Navy. The President says in effect that insofar as the admirals opposed this additional outlay for new Air Force planes, they were right. Having disciplined the Navy by firing Admiral Denfeld, Mr. Truman has now disciplined the Air Force by holding it in line with a balanced concept of our defense requirements. The effect should be to ease the tension in the Armed Services.

As to the President's authority to take such action, we doubt that any serious question will arise. Representative Vinson, when he recently proposed to amend the Unification Act to require the approval of Congress for cutbacks in administrative funds, seems to have conceded that the President now has the right to make such cutbacks. It is true, of course, that the President's action is similar to the item veto which, under the Constitution, he does not possess. Yet there is an important difference. Mr. Truman has not vetoed this item. He has said only that he will not at present exercise the very general authority that Congress has given him to spend it. The only result, as we see it, is to give Congress a salutary opportunity for second thoughts on a question of great national importance.

Unhallows' Night

Well, here it is, Halloween again, and we wish you as comfortable a time of it as our somewhat eccentric American tradition concerning this festival permits. If you live in the suburbs or one of the quieter neighborhoods, it should not be unendurable; and you may even get a nostalgic pleasure in recalling some ancient exploits of your own. But if you are sensible, you will take the usual precautions, such as fetching inside or nailing down the portable portions of your property—porch furniture, fence gates, bird baths, sun dials, wrought iron Newfoundland dogs and, if you have one, your marble statue of the Goddess Artemis.

Just how this ancient druidic festival—for that is really what it is, although the name itself is derived from the Christian calendar—came to acquire in this climate some of the characteristics of the pre-Lenten carnival and of the Feast of Fools, that is to say how it became a time of licensed license, is something of a mystery. In ancient times Halloween had decidedly sinister connotations, and decent, peaceable folk gave a great sigh of relief when it was all over. It was the day when the souls of the evil departed were permitted a night off and spent it in their favorite amusement, which was doing mischief. It had also, it seems, a certain astronomical and meteorological significance like our own New Year's Eve vigil; for in Celtic countries the year ended with the last harvest. Thus it was also a time when offenses committed during the year were judged and punishments prescribed.

Only among the police, however, does something of the ancient pagan attitude toward Halloween persist. At best the police are inclined to regard it as a nuisance. There are, of course, many good reasons why they dislike the idea of large and noisy crowds of masked revelers moving about in search of excitement; but Halloween customs are now so well entrenched in the national folkways that they cannot be prohibited. Indeed, the police are hard put to decide where the line should be drawn between innocent and malicious mischief. Up in Greenbelt, for example, there has been a controversy about whether the breaking of windows should be considered in the light of intolerable rowdyism or as a bit of good, clean, wholesome fun.

In recent years there has been an effort to regularize the Halloween mischief, as, for example, according to the principle of "tricks or treats," which permits a householder or shopkeeper to purchase immunity from persecution. The principle, of course, is much the same as the "protection" provided by gangsters or by medieval barons in return for their feudal dues. Thus perhaps it is possible to justify the Halloween customs on the ground of their value as education in political science.

City-Wide Planning

The highlights of the "Comprehensive Plan" for Washington which William Wurster, new chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, put into a speech last week renew hope that the plan itself will soon be ready for release. It has been too long in the making. For want of a city-wide plan, haphazard growth has continued in some areas, and redevelopment of blighted areas has probably been retarded.

The NCPPC has done good work in many fields. In reclaiming the Mall, developing the city's parks and playgrounds, modernizing its highway system and designating specific areas for Government buildings it has contributed greatly to the transformation of Washington from a country town to a great city. Some of its plans, such as that for the George Washington Memorial Parkway, have not yet been fully realized, and others, such as that for development of the East Capitol st. area, have not yet begun to take material form. It has long been evident, however, that the NCPPC needs to extend its vision beyond parks, highways and monumental buildings. The city's most acute planning problem today is in regard to redevelopment of its blighted residential areas, and in this field the NCPPC has done relatively little.

Dean Wurster speaks hopefully of an aggressive attack on the slums as "a start toward accomplishment of the objectives of decent, safe and sanitary housing for all the population." This, at least, raises the hope that the "Comprehensive Plan" is to include a city-wide pattern that will guide the development and redevelopment of residential areas. The first important thing about a city, even the Capital City, is that people live there. It seems to us basic that any comprehensive plan should make allowance for housing of all types that the people need and are likely to need in the foreseeable future. That, of course, means low-rental housing as well as areas for private homes and luxurious apartment buildings.

The planning done by the NCPPC in this sphere to date has taken too narrow a view. Its plan for Marshall Heights treated that single area almost as if it were a little city by itself. What is needed is a plan for utilization of the Marshall Heights area to the best advantage of the community as a whole. If we fail to use a substantial portion of such sparsely settled areas for low-cost housing, it is going to be impossible to relieve the overcrowding of the in-town slums. Piecemeal planning in a city the size of Washington is a misnomer. Now that slum clearance and construction of public housing are to be resumed on a substantial scale, it is of the utmost importance to provide a comprehensive pattern that will make allowance for decent living conditions for all the people.

Ambassador To Tito

Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, who has just been named Ambassador to Yugoslavia, is used to hot spots. He is a tough-minded career diplomat who, as Ambassador to Iran during the troublesome period in 1946, is credited with doing much to strengthen the Iranian determination to resist Russian aggression. He will have a similar job in Belgrade. The task here is one of great delicacy, and it was performed with considerable finesse by the retiring Ambassador, Cavendish Cannon. It is not to make policy, but to represent, observe and report, keeping in mind that the American interest lies not in fawning over Tito or indorsing his ideology, but in encouraging each and every break with the Kremlin's brand of imperialism.

Earth's colors all are flown;
Like lost and frightened sheep
In many a huddled heap
The littered leaves are blown,
For whom will winter spread her mantle down
And lay them all asleep.

Pensions

One particular point in Lois Carlisle's letter of October 18 needs some explanation. It is a mistake to believe that the steel companies are refusing Mr. Murray noncontributory pensions for his union when they "granted" such pensions to Mr. Lewis in the captive mines.

The agreement to levy 5 cents a ton on coal to finance the UMW miners' fund was made between Secretary of Interior Krug and John L. Lewis after the Government seized the coal mines in May, 1946. All mine owners, including steel companies, had to continue that agreement to get their mines back. Mr. Lewis' pension fund was wrung from the Government, not "granted" by steel companies.

That the plan was unsound has been demonstrated by increased levies on coal and recent suspension of payments by the fund. Evidently the steel companies don't want to get into that sort of a mess.

The matter of executive pensions is being completely distorted. In the first place, many steel executive pensions are on a contributory basis with the same plan established for all eligible salaried employes. Secondly, executive pensions are not really pensions, but employment contracts to hold topflight executive talent under a tax system that makes high salaries unattractive.

Formula For Peace

The cornerstone-laying ceremonies of the new home of the United Nations are a reminder of the eternal quest of the human race for peace. Through the ages came down to us two formulas relating to that goal. One, centuries before the Christian era, by the Hebrew prophet Isaiah. It was no accident that the scroll of the Book of Isaiah was found recently in a cave by a Bedoin shepherd.

It was a timely reminder—God's voice through the prophet crying out to the human race: "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

The second formula how to obtain peace, the pagan one, came down to us from the Romans: "Si vis pace para bellum (If you wish peace, prepare for war.)"

This second formula was followed through the ages and brought disaster after disaster, and is now threatening humanity with annihilation.

Isn't it about time that the whole world should try the first formula?

Greece's Aims

October 28 marked the ninth anniversary of Greece's entry into the Second World War at the side of the Western democracies. This observance coincided with current victories of Greek armed forces over the communist rebellion of the past five years. Inspired and armed from abroad.

At this anniversary, Greek people dare to hope for the first time that warfare is finally ended and peace may be beginning. Fully aware of the great moral force that helped shape victory over lawlessness and disorder, and appreciative of sympathetic understanding from the free and civilized democracies of the world, they now confidently look to the pursuit of such peaceful occupations as rebuilding their nation physically and economically.

While continuing a constant vigil to safeguard their borders from such fresh dangers as may emanate from abroad, the Greek people will now begin realizing their great national dream of fashioning a model progressive democracy among the Red satellite countries of the Middle East and the Balkans; those dual vital aims now constitute their main concern.

A new generation of Greeks has matured in the past nine years of strife and turmoil; a generation throughly cognizant of the vast American aid program which has made victory possible and peace a reality. This generation looks for continuing cooperation with all the democratic peoples of the world, but especially to ever-strengthing ties of understanding and friendship with that greatest democracy of all, the United States of America.

Nehru And Wallace

Albert A. Volk, in his letter of October 27, mocks the inconsistency of "little minds" when President Truman and Eleanor Roosevelt pay tribute to the pacifism of Pandit Nehru yet reject our native philosopher Henry A. Wallace for similar views.

Mr. Volk forgets prophets are without honor in their own country. This is particularly true of false prophets. Even a full-page letter in the New York Times could hardly document Mr. Wallace's alleged martyrdom. His ability to turn his coat and prostrate himself both East and West is too well known to make his mouth frothings the stigmata of true sanctity.

Pandit Nehru's pacifism is the nonviolence of universal brotherhood. Mr. Wallace's pacifism only is to be practiced by the intended victims of the atheist slavemasters of the Kremlin.

The Wallace brand of pacifism advocates nonresistance to a conspiracy to deny mankind the Four Freedoms. Yet apostate Wallace piously insists he inherited the mantle of liberalism from Franklin D. Roosevelt. Very definitely Mr. Volk has proven his point: "Consistency is the hoboglobin of little minds."

Moral Values And War

Some of those who have commented on the recent headlines regarding unification troubles, have referred caustically to the Navy's "sudden sense" of moral values in waging war as so eloquently presented by Rear Admiral Ofstie. Without debating the sincerity of the presentation (in my opinion, it was deeply sincere), it might be interesting to view it from the realistic position.

In this connection, I commend to the attention of such skeptics an article by Cyril Falls, Chichele Professor of the History of War at Oxford, which appeared in the Illustrated News on June 5, 1948, and is extracted in Military Review. The viewpoint seems to coincide rather thoroughly with Admiral Ofstie's.

In speaking of American policy and military strategy as he interprets it from reading the comments of American "war scribes" and journalists, Professor Falls says:

"But, the journalists go on to say, even then the United States could not pit herself against the Russians in Europe with land forces and has no intention of attempting what Napoleon and Hitler failed to accomplish. The aim would be to establish a ring of bomber bases round Russia and gradually to tighten it. Attacks would be launched against Moscow and the industries in its neighborhood and those of the eastern Ukraine.

"It is claimed that, despite the movement of industry eastward and even beyond the Urals, the essential part of it still remains in European Russia, and would therefore be vulnerable. Britain, provided that it had been held, would be regarded by the Americans as an advanced air base, which might, of course, suffer the fate which has befallen some other advanced air bases in the past . . .

"If this sketch were, in fact, to represent the ideas of the fighting services of the United States, the prospect before those European states which are inclined to resist Russian domination would be extremely bleak. Those on the Continent would be quickly overrun and occupied according to the program, Britain might not be, but physically her fate would be far worse than theirs.

"The Russians, having reached the Channel, would install long-range weapons with which to bombard this country, and the effects might be expected to be more deadly than those of the bombardments by V1's and V2's by the Germans . . ."

He then goes on to point out how such a policy would play into the hands of Russia and the "fellow travellers" of Europe. He concludes by stating:

"I suppose the truth is that the military policy of the United States is at present in a phase of flux and that one cannot expect it to become steady and firm until the political issue for the coming years has been settled. One of the best barriers against war would be the knowledge that the United States not only approved of the union of democratic forces in Europe but also intended to support it when created with all the means at her disposal, that she did not start from the premise of the complete loss of Europe if Russia went to war, and that in such an event she would not begin by adopting a policy which would safeguard her own comfort and prosperity at the expense of Europe.

"A war fought by bomber alone would solve no problems, because it would end in a state of destruction, confusion, misery and bitterness far worse than that which has followed the Second World War.

"I am sure that the most thoughtful of the American statesmen and military chiefs are well aware of this already, but it has been proved in this country that understanding and the power and courage to make the people understand do not always amount to the same thing. The European nations which have been encouraged by the United States to look across the Atlantic for moral and material aid in preserving their freedom merit the assurance that the United States regards preservation as feasible and holds out some prospect less chilling than that of reconquest by the bomb, perhaps by the atomic bomb. Human nature cannot be left out of account in war, and it has its limits. We want to avoid war and may be sanguine enough to say that we expect none; but if we should ever be driven to a war of defense, it is of interest to know the terms on which it is likely to be fought."

REAR ADMIRAL.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Denfeld Story

BEHIND THE DRAMA of the relief of Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, several grave issues have been pretty successfully concealed. The most important of these is the nature of the duty owed to the civilian chiefs of the armed services by the services' uniformed leaders.

Admiral Denfeld, it must first of all be remembered, was chosen to be Chief of Naval Operations because he was thought likely to cooperate in the service unification which he has now attacked. The late Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal (who would personally have preferred Admiral Forrest P. Sherman) made no secret of the fact that he had named Denfeld as the most available of the high-ranking officers who would not continue to fight unification after it became law.

Furthermore, after being named Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Denfeld fulfilled these expectations. He accepted unification's basic principle, that each of the three services must work to the agreed strategic plans laid down by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He concurred in the Key West and Newport agreements, limiting the Navy's mission to control of the seas. And all this was bitterly resented by the clique of naval aviators led by Admiral A. W. Radford, whose giant carrier project was in fact a project for putting the Navy into the strategic aviation business.

WHEN ADMIRAL DENFELD came up for reappointment as Chief of Naval Operations last summer, the current storm was already brewing. At that time, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews pointedly asked Admiral Denfeld whether he still remained loyal to the idea of unification, and particularly to its underlying principle. Admiral Denfeld assured the Secretary that he need have no fear on these points.

Shortly thereafter, the storm broke with Captain Crommelin's first public statement, which was almost certainly the planned first move of a planned attack concerted by the whole naval aviators' group. It is vital to realize that this attack was originally aimed at Admiral Denfeld himself, who was then being bitterly criticized for his weakness in presenting the Navy case to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Yet when Admiral Bogan sent in his commentary on Captain Crommelin's statement, Admiral Denfeld appended a somewhat noncommittal but decidedly amiable indorsement. Therefore, when Crommelin passed out these documents to the press, Secretary Matthews at once sent for Admiral Denfeld and demanded to know where he stood. It was then that the astonished Secretary learned that his Chief of Naval Operations, who had been so free with contrary asurances, now proposed to join in the attack which had first been aimed at himself and his record.

Until the last moment, Defense Department leaders continued to wonder whether Admiral Denfeld would be quite so agile as to support Captain Crommelin and Admiral Radford in open hearings. Yet he did so in the end.

The explanation seems to be that Admiral Denfeld was not strong enough to stand up under the pressure of Navy opinion, the threat of actual ostracism which always hangs over any Navy maverick. Perhaps he recalled how the great Admiral Sims was totally ostracized for fighting to replace the Navy's bureau organization, even then barnacle-crusted, by a modern staff system. The Navy still has no true general staff. And Sims, the most brilliant naval officer of the first World War, is still execrated.

SEEN IN THIS LIGHT, the behavior of Admiral Denfeld becomes at least understandable, and his personal tragedy evokes deep sympathy. At the same time, the action of Secretary Matthews remains beyond reasonable criticism. The Secretary had a right to expect that his Chief of Naval Operations would not change his mind about the assurances he had given. This expectation was disappointed. Furthermore, a situation was created in which the subordination of the uniformed services to their civilian leaders was plainly at stake — for any kind of discipline is clearly impossible if recalcitrants have only to plead "honor" and "honest conviction" in order to escape from it.

It is an odd fact that aside from the unjustly maligned Gen. Omar Bradley, the only man who has shown much courage and conviction in this service row should have been picked from a card file. Secretary Matthews was so chosen, from a file at Democratic National Headquarters, when the President and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson wanted a quick replacement for the abruptly departing former Secretary of the Navy, John Sullivan. Matthews' recommendations then were the fact that he was an Irish-Catholic, and his large party contributions. If the facts are understood, however, the card file must now be admitted to have produced a man of character.

Socialists And Liberals

ROME.—My preceding article was written in Switzerland after a visit to France and Western Germany and in the light of Mr. Attlee's decision not to have an election in Britain for some time to come. It dwelt on the fact that in the three key countries the governments have no certain mandate and can take only short views.

Lippmann

One can, of course, find a local explanation in each country for the weakness and uncertainty of its government. But there may be also a general explanation of why at this time in virtually the whole European part of the Atlantic community the struggle of political parties is so keen that strong governments with decided policies are not being formed.

AS A broad generalization and for what it may be worth, I think the explanation may be that Western Europe is just entering a fourth phase of its postwar experience. In the first, which lasted from the armistice to the rupture of four-power collaboration, the foundation of the Cominform and the outbreak of the cold war, the governments were coalitions which included the Communist parties.

In the second phase the governments became anti-Communist coalitions, led either by Democratic-Socialists or by semi-Socialist Christian Democrats. They felt themselves threatened by revolutionary communism and by invasion of the Red army. They were supported by Marshall aid and guaranteed externally by American military power.

In the third phase the fear of communism diminished as a substantial economic recovery took place; the fear of military invasion subsided as the American rearmament progressed and as the Soviet Union made no moves to exploit the military weakness of Western Europe.

IN THE fourth phase, which I think is now beginning, there is enough internal and external sense of security to permit a revival of domestic politics; there is enough economic recovery to make people feel that they are no longer struggling to exist but that they can struggle to live better and to satisfy their ambitions.

Insofar as Soviet military imperialism is felt to be contained and revolutionary communism checked, a struggle for power is breaking out within the anti-Communist coalitions. Though the division is not clearly defined along party lines, broadly speaking the contest is between Socialists and Liberals.

I WISH there were less shopworn words available to describe the character of this struggle. For after a hundred years of use and abuse these words are rather like the soft money which the traveler has to carry with him on the continent. They are frayed, soiled, clumsy to handle, and of uncertain worth. But nevertheless even soft money is necessary to the transaction of business and the tired words like Socialist and liberal are unavoidable in any brief report of what is happening.

But like the money the words have to be redefined and revalued. For our present discussion I would define the difference between socialism and liberalism as turning upon whether the production of wealth shall in the main be regulated by competition in the market place or be planned and directed and managed from government offices.

Thus there is no necessary difference in principle between Socialists and liberals on the political institutions of a free and democratic state. Nor is there any difference between them on the obligation of the community to provide public services, from armies to art museums, or to protect the weak against the strong, or to conserve natural resources and see that they are developed, or to promote the public welfare. The issue between Socialists and liberals is about the production of the wealth from which all public and private income is derived.

On this issue the Socialists lean toward government administration, believing that private actions for private profit will not harmonize to serve the public interest. The liberals lean toward individual and corporate competition, believing that it alone offers the incentive and the compulsion to produce wealth without the sacrifice of political freedom. The liberals believe that if the government is to administer a large part of the production of wealth, then unavoidably there will be a swelling bureaucracy. And since human affairs are too complicated to be planned and managed efficiently, the government authorities must make up for the mistakes in their plans and for the inefficiency of their administration by an ever-increasing use of the police power of the state.

IN THE broadest terms it may be said that in Western Europe the Socialist principle was dominant during the war and in the years immediately after. Though the Socialists are still very powerful in all western countries, they are now challenged by a reviving liberalism. On the western continent in any event some kind of liberalism in economic matters is now favored by perhaps half of the non-Communist voters. Among the parties that participate in the government of France, Western Germany and Italy (the Communists having been excluded since 1947) the balance is now very slightly in favor of the non-Socialist liberals. That is why it is impossible to form Socialist governments. Yet because the liberals have such a slender plurality, so it is very difficult to form stable non-Socialist governments.

Thus there is a kind of permanent political crisis. The anti-Communists, who comprise something like 60 to 90 percent of the active electorate, are themselves very nearly evenly divided into Socialists and non-Socialists. The balance is closer and is also more complicated than the very misleading party names would indicate. In all countries for example there is a wing of the Christian Democrats which, though it rejects Marxism as a philosophy, is predominantly Socialist in practice. And there are also strong elements, nominally Socialist, which are fundamentally liberal. Moreover there are important elements, calling themselves liberal, which are in fact monopolistic, plutocratic, or semi-feudal.

IT IS improbable, it seems to me, that this struggle can be resolved while Europe is divided by the military occupation and while the crisis of the sterling area brings on one international emergency after another. But one can say, I think, that for the time being the Socialists are men who have had their chance to reconstruct Europe and have not succeeded. Though there is a considerable recovery since the war, Europe is not within sight of solvency, or of a modest unity, or of a standard of life which the masses of wage earners in all countries, and great masses of the peasants in the more southern countries, will accept with good will.

But the opportunity of the liberals, which has arrived, is still based on the default of the Socialists rather than on their own clear purposes and proven capacity to solve the problems of Europe. A great deal depends on how they use the opportunity which is being presented to them. About that there is much more to be said.

Barkley, who is staying at the Park Plaza Hotel here, said he planned to return to Washington Tuesday.

He has been here since yesterday. He was here a week ago last Saturday and returned to Washington for only three days.

So was her mother, Mrs. Estell Rucker, who said:

"I've been sitting on a volcano. It suddenly blew up. All this excitement."

Barkley, smiling at reporters, said he was "honored by Mrs. Hadley's acceptance."

When the call was put through to President Truman, he spoke to both Mrs. Hadley and Barkley.

Jane Hadley, 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. Hadley, was present when her mother made the announcement. She, too, was all smiles. Mrs. Hadley has another daughter, Anne 17.

Mrs. Hadley was not wearing an engagement ring. When she was asked about this, Barkley interupted, laughingly:

"This is so sudden."

Married in 1903 to Miss Dorothy Bower, Barkley has been a widower since March, 1947. Mrs. Max O. Truitt, a daughter, has been his official hostess since he became Vice President last January 20.

The Vice President has two other children, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, and David Barkley. He has six grandchildren.

The Hadley-Barkley romance began last spring in Washington. The two met at a party in her honor by Clark Clifford, presidential adviser. Mrs. Hadley and her husband, who died in 1945, were old friends of Clifford's.

From then on, date followed date, the amiable Veep courting the handsome widow every time his public appearance took him near St. Louis.

Through it all, Barkley joked and jested about the possibilities of a marriage, dodging direct answers about the romance. Mrs. Hadley parried all questions with a smiling "no comment."

Barkley's answers, and comment, did much to spur the public's interest.

The first hint came when Barkley crowned a queen at a jewelers' convention.

"Some day I may crown a queen of my own," he said.

Later at his home town of Paducah, Ky., where he took Mrs. Hadley to attend an airport dedication, he brought the spectators to attention by announcing he would introduce his "queen."

Then he pointed to a little girl, a relative of his. The audience—including Mrs. Hadley—joined in the laughter.

In September he attended Mrs. Hadley's birthday party. He denied a report he gave her a diamond ring and a bracelet, but said that, instead, his present was a book. It's title: "Women Are Here to Stay."

Later, at Chicago, where he attended a luncheon, he told a news conference:

"We're just good friends." Then added: "So far."

Barkley only once became publicly annoyed at the attention reporters and photographers were giving his dates.

He instructed waiters at the Shwank Chase Hotel in St. Louis to oust three newsmen and five photographers from the Chase's plush Starlight Roof.

"This is my private life, and I don't want you to interfere with it," Barkley told a photographer.

The President is very close to his Veep and would want to be on hand when the Kentuckian marches down the aisle with the attractive widow from the Chief Executive's home State, these sources said.

Mrs. Hadley's announcement brought no great surprise to this Capital, which long has suspected Cupid was along on Barkley's frequent trips to St. Louis.

Mrs. Truitt said the news was "wonderful," but she knew about it since last Friday.

"My father told me," she said. She said Barkley called her up again tonight before the press conference to inform her the announcement would be made publicly.

Asked how she felt about being replaced as Barkley's hostess, she replied:

"She's just more than welcome to it. She'll do a swell job. She is good-looking, charming, poised and intelligent. I think she's going to make him very happy."

Mrs. Hadley would not comment about assuming duties as vice presidential hostess and would not even say if she would live at Washington.

Truman Calls for Renewal Of Devotion to Religion

declared belief that "every problem in the world today could be solved if men would only live by the principles of the ancient prophets and the Sermon on the Mount."

Duty to Participate

Each person, he asserted, "has a duty to participate—actively—in the religious life of his community and to support generously his own religious institutions."

Also speaking on the broadcast were Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Co. and chairman of the campaign; former Judge Joseph Proskauer, one-time president of the American Jewish Committee, and singer Bing Crosby.

The "Religion in American Life" movement, Wilson said, is to "awaken in everyone an awareness of his own responsibility to attend and support the church or synagogue of his choice."

Text of President's Speech

Following is the complete text of the President's speech:

"The United States has been a deeply religious nation from its earliest beginnings. The need which the founders of our country felt—the need to be free to worship God, each man in his own way—was one of the strongest impulses that brought men from Europe to the new world. As the pioneers carved a civilization from the forest, they set a pattern which has lasted to our own time. First, they built homes and then, knowing the need for religion in their daily lives, they built churches. When the United States was established, its coins bore witness to the American faith in a benevolent Deity. The motto then was 'In God We Trust.' That is still our motto and we, as a people, still place our firm trust in God.

"Building on this foundation of faith, the United States has grown from a small country in the wilderness to a position of great strength and great responsibility among the family of nations. Other countries look today to the United States for leadership in the ways of peace, and it is our task to meet that challenge.

Are Strong Enough

"I am convinced that we are strong enough to meet the challenge. We are strong enough because we have a profound religious faith. The basic source of our strength as a nation is spiritual. We believe in the dignity of man. We believe that he is created in the image of God, who is the Father of us all.

"It is this faith that makes us determined that every citizen in our own land shall have an equal right and an equal opportunity to grow in wisdom and in stature, and to play his part in the affairs of our Nation.

"It is this faith that makes us respect the right of men everywhere to worship as they please and to live their own lives free from the fear of tyranny and strife.

"It is this faith that inspires us to work for a world in which life will be more worth while—a world of tolerance, unselfishness and brotherhood—a world that lives according to the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount.

"I believe that every problem in the world today could be solved if men would only live by the principles of the ancient prophets and the Sermon on the Mount.

"Each one of us can do his part by a renewed devotion to his religion. If there is any danger to the religious life of our nation, it lies in our taking our religious heritage too much for granted. Religion is not a static thing. It exists not in buildings, but in the minds and hearts of our people.

"Religion is like freedom. We cannot take it for granted. Man—to be free—must work at it. And man—to be truly religious—must work at that, too. Unless men live by their faith, and practice that faith in their daily lives, religion cannot be a living force in the world today.

"That is why each of us has a duty to participate—actively—in the religious life of his community and to support generously his own religious institutions.

"Just as an active faith sustained and guided the pioneers in conquering the wilderness, so today an active faith will sustain and guide us as we work for a just peace, freedom for all, and a world where human life is truly held sacred.

"Religious faith and religious work must be our reliance as we strive to fulfill our destiny in the world."

will be made by Maurice J. Tobin, Secretary of Labor and chairman of the Government unit in the campaign; Maurice L. Nee, Thornton W. Owen, and Minor Hudson Advance Gifts-Business I unit; Charles C. Glover 3d for Advance Gifts-General; Aaron Goldman for Business II; Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel for Residential; Randall J. Hicks for Alexandria; Lawrence Michael for Arlington; George Stewart for Fairfax County; James A. Mitchell for Montgomery County, and Smith H. Purdum for Prince Georges County.

Worshipers in Protestant churches here yesterday heard a special prayer for success of the campaign, composed by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, who sent the prayer and a special plea for mention of the drive to 800 ministers.

In Catholic churches, at all masses, a letter calling on members of that faith to contribute, was read. It was written by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

"The success of our civic life," the archbishop wrote, "depends largely upon the religious inspiration of its citizens, which prompts them not to be content with a grudging minimum of help, but to make a willing and generous sharing of their goods with those in need. You are not merely partaking in a laudable civic effort, but you are rendering a personal service to Christ, who identified himself with every needy person."

Mantle's Mantle Fits John Chapman

By Richard L. Coe

THE SPATE of books about the theater continues.

John Chapman, who succeeded Burns Mantle as drama critic of the New York News, continues into his third season as editor of "The Burns Mantle Best Plays" series. The Mantle mantle has fallen neatly onto his shoulders and once more this annual offering of Dodd, Mead is a volume theater librarians won't want to miss.

The Mantle custom was to choose what he considered the ten best of the season's new plays, summarizing them carefully where he's not including large chunks of straight dialogue. Chapman adapts well and thoroughly.

For 1948-49 his choices are: "Death of a Salesman," "Anne of the Thousand Days," "The Madwoman of Chaillot," "Detective Story," "Edward, My Son," "Life With Mother,' "Goodbye, My Fancy," "Light Up the Sky,' "The Silver Whistle" and "Two Blind Mice."

None of these, you need hardly be told, has been seen here, though half of them have been on view in Baltimore and Philadelphia.

One decisive advantage this annual has over the Nathan yearbooks is the reports by leading editors of other cities besides New York. Elliot Norton's summary of the Boston season, for instance, is especially revealing. That city, which next year's census probably will show to be not much larger than our metropolitan area—roughly a million and a half—has seven commercial theaters. The critic of the Boston Post reports that during the year 52 dramatic offerings played those theaters, excluding summer theater activity. Makes Washington look pretty shoddy, huh?

Chicago's Miss Cassidy

Then there's Claudia Cassidy's sharp report on Chicago. The second largest city of the land (four million) had 249 weeks of playgoing in nine theaters split between 37 attractions.

Miss Cassidy, of the Tribune, summed it up as "a time when producers began to worry a little about Chicago, which was only fair, considering how long Chicago has worried about producers. Seeking the lodestar of our favor the hard way, they made serious inquiry: 'What does Chicago want?' when all Chicago ever wanted is its share of the playgoers' dream: more good shows before they moult and something better than the sixteenth row on the side."

Philadelphia's Arthur B. Waters reports for his third-ranking city of three million souls 48 bookings playing a total of 105 weeks in four regular playhouses. Waters makes the point that while "it was a comparatively easy task to pick the ten best plays on the list, it would have been next to impossible to choose a 'second ten' list. There just weren't another ten worthwhile offerings on the charts."

Casts, summaries and standing statistics are included in Chapman's volume. Including the decade summaries of 1899-1909-1919 which Mantle did with Garrison P. Sherwood, publication of this edition now gives the series a fifty-year sweep on quite another level than Ward Morehouse's recently published and utterly grand "Matinee Tomorrow."

"THE BURNS MANTLE BEST PLAYS—1948-49." Edited by John Chapman. Dodd, Mead, $4.

Another valuable book is Eric Bentley's "From the Modern Repertoire, Series One."

Here the elusively mental Mr. Bentley is giving us a collection of dramas not found in other anthologies. "Every play in the collection has been written for the stage. Every play has, in fact, at some time or other been staged. I reprint each in the hope that someone will be inspired to stage it again. This is not to say that the volume is not meant for the reader. Every good play is at home both on the stage and in the study."

What makes this volume valuable is that it includes frequently referred to works but immensely difficult ones to locate in the library, let alone the stages to which Bentley trusts some of his readers will bring his choices.

These are: Alfred de Musset's "Fantasio," George Buchner's "Danton's Death," Henri Becque's "La Parisienne," Arthur Schnitzler's 'Round Dance," Carl Sternheim's "The Snob," T. S. Eliot's "Sweeney Agonistes," Bertolt Brecht's "The Threepenny Opera," Lorca's "The Love of Don Perlimplin and Belisa in the Garden," Jean Cocteau's "The Infernal Machine" and W. B. Yeats' "A Full Moon in March."

"FROM THE MODERN REPERTOIRE, Series One." Edited by Eric Bentley. University of Denver Press, $50.

Art Lectures Start Tuesday At Corcoran

The first of a series of five November lectures on art will be given at the Corcoran School of Art auditorium, 17th st. and New York ave. nw., at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday.

The series, to be given on successive Tuesday nights, will be given by Eugen Weisz, vice principal of the school. They will be addressed to laymen as well as artists, and be illustrated with colored slides.

In the first two lectures Weisz will discuss what the artists of various epochs of the past needed to know about craftsmanship and how much of this knowledge is available and useful to artists today. The use of painting in comparison to sculpture, and the artist's intent in realism in comparison to abstraction, will be discussed in subsequent lectures.

A second series of five lectures, given by Richard Lahey, principal of the school, will start February 7.

Admission to the lectures will be by season ticket only. Tickets for the 10 lectures cost $6, and are available at the school.

Murray Pushes War On CIO Communists

Walking's Not Good Enough

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 30. (U.P.)—President Philip Murray tonight bitterly accused "a small but noisy clique" of CIO officials of promoting "the Communist program of destruction" in the American labor movement.

In a report to the national CIO convention opening here Monday, Murray said the CIO no longer can tolerate the "disunity" created by the Communists and their stooges in the dozen left-wing CIO unions.

He predicted the convention, before the week is out, would take strong action to get rid of the CIO's pro-Communist bloc.

Also in his report, Murray:

1. Blamed the month-old steel strike on the "indecent unwillingness of the steel industry to bargain in good faith with the CIO Steelworkers Union." He repeated that the steelworkers would stay on strike until their demands for pensions and health insurance are granted.

2. Accused a "devilish and short-sighted coalition of Republican reactionaries and Southern Democrats" in Congress of wrecking repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. He said the same group was responsible for the Congress failure to pass "other much-needed social legislation."

3. Called for greater CIO political action in next week's congressional elections to bring about the defeat of "the many outspoken enemies of labor in the Congress."

But it was on the fight between left and right-wing factions in the CIO that Murray had the most to say.

"I have examined at great length the 'demands' of the small group within the CIO who adhere to the program of the Communist Party," Murray said.

"Only one conclusion can be reached.

"The Communist program for American labor is a program of destruction and the CIO wants none of it."

Murray Deaf to Peace Bid by Electricians

Cleveland, Oct. 30 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray today turned a deaf ear on a new United Electrical Workers' peace proposal aimed at avoiding a left-right split at the CIO convention beginning Monday.

The UE, biggest and most influential of the dozen left-wing-led unions facing ouster at the convention, offered a much softer program for cooperating with the CIO than the six-point "ultimatum" handed to Murray a month ago.

The Electrical Workers' leaders received about the same treatment today as did another delegation yesterday from leftist Harry Bridges' Longshoremen, a noisy, three-hour session which broke up with what appeared to be harsh feelings on both sides.

High School Teachers To Hear Chicago Man

In the first of three professional programs sponsored by the District High School Teachers Association, Lew Parmenter, executive manager of the National School Service Institute from Chicago, will speak on "The Art of Public Relations" before the High School Teachers Association tonight at 8 o'clock in McKinley Senior High, 2d and T sts. ne.

Snow and Cold Blast West

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP). — Fairly large areas of snow overspread the weather map today.

The snowy weather extended over parts of Colorado, Wyoming, North Dakota and Minnesota. There was three inches on the ground at Denver. Freezing and below-freezing weather was reported over much of the upper plains and northern Rockies, with Laramie, Wyo., recording a low of 12 degrees, and Big Piney, Wyo., 14 degrees. Cheyenne, Wyo., had 20, and Minot, N. D., 22.

The cold air mass of the upper midcontinent spread eastward over the northern Mississippi Valley and into the Great Lakes region. Snow flurries and freezing weather were predicted for tonight over much of this region.

Lewis Balked In Fund Bid

pended September 17 by a 2-1 vote of the trustees, Van Horn voting against Lewis and Bridges.

The suspension was ordered as a "temporary expedient," Lewis disclosed at the time, to save the fund from going into the red. The suspension resolution provided for continuing the benefits in emergency cases, such as the paraplegic miners—spinal injury patients—now under treatment at George Washington University Hospital here.

At another meeting of the trustees—within the past two weeks—the trustees discovered there was only about 12 million dollars left in the fund, of which some nine million dollars had accumulated from the 20-cent-a-ton royalties since June 30, when the operator-union contract expired.

Trustees Bridges and Van Horn decided the nine million dollars must be set aside until a new contract is signed. The majority of trustees felt they would be subjected to civil suits if they permitted expenditure of the nine million dollars in the absence of a contract.

Appearance a Surprise

Lewis argued that the 9 million dollars should be unfrozen to assure continuance of the emergency benefits, which cost about 2 million dollars a month. He pointed out that the 3 million dollars that came into the fund before June 30 was hardly enough to insure such continuity in view of the stalemate over a new contract.

The soft-coal miners walked out for contract improvements on September 19—two days after the fund benefits were suspended—and negotiations have for all practical purposes run into a dead end.

Van Horn's appearance at the latest meeting of the trustees came as something of a surprise. Following the September meeting, Van Horn disclosed he had submitted his resignation to the operators as their representative on the board of trustees of the fund.

Lewis, contacted here, and Van Horn, reached by phone in Cleveland, refused to comment on the secret meeting. Senator Bridges, stricken with a virus infection at his home in Concord, N. H., was unavailable.

Tobin Blames Steel Strike on Big Firms

between top union leaders might be behind the walkouts. He did not elaborate.

Tobin said steel executives have "no sound moral ground" when they proclaim themselves opposed to wholly company-financed pensions "on principle." They themselves benefit from company pensions running as high as $50,000 a year, he said.

The Labor Secretary said the fact-finding board's recommendation of a 10-cent-an-hour package of company-financed pensions and insurance is "fair and reasonable" and "should be accepted" by industry as it has been by the union.

Agreeing it is "unfortunate that the Nation's economy is running downhill" because of the steel strike, Tobin shouted:

"The responsibility is Big Steel's!"

Steinkraus said the issue in the strike is "not pensions," but "the union's refusal to take a little more time to talk this complex problem over."

He noted that the board recommended that the parties work out details of a pension program through collective bargaining and seek to put one in effect by March 1, 1950.

"There is no urgent, immediate issue at stake in this strike to justify throwing a million men out of work," the Chamber of Commerce head declared.

Ching was expected to continue giving the steel strike top priority on his services, while renewing his thus-far-futile mediation in the coal strike.

His effort in the coal dispute were intensified after Lewis hinted at Scranton, Pa., over the weekend he may call on eastern ePnnsylvania's 80,000 anthracite miners to quit the pits again in sympathy with the soft-coal miners.

A hard-coal strike would raise the specter of millions of unheated homes in the East and shutdown of many industries dependent on that type of fuel.

In the steel case, Ching scheduled a conference here Tuesday with officials of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., the Republic Steel Corp., and the Jones & Laughlin Corp., as a follow-up to the talks he ended Friday in New York with United States Steel Corp.

The steel companies and the union are all but hopelessly deadlocked over the union's demand for a pension, paid entirely by the companies, plus insurance benefits of 10 cents an hour for all steelworkers.

Federal officials said Ching will reenter the coal dispute this week, but probably not until Wednesday, by asking management and the union to meet him here.

Strikes, Plus 5-Day Week, Give Pennsy a Deficit

Philadelphia, Oct. 30 (AP).—Its operations crippled by the coal strike and operating costs increased by the new five-day week for its employes, the Pennsylvania Railroad's net income tumbled into the red for the first nine months of 1949, the Nation's largest railroad reported today.

3678 See Redskins and Bulldogs Play 14-All Tie

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE GENTLEMAN who has been scouting Notre Dame for Michigan State these last five weekends was muttering a strange tribute to the Irish, as he packed his notes at the conclusion of their 40-0 victory over Navy at Baltimore. "They're inconsistent," he said with a trace of a moan.

"You can't tab 'em and be sure your scouting reports aren't worth a nickel," he said. "I've watched them from the start of the season, and Frank Leahy unveils a new hero each week. He springs a different touchdown-maker on you every Saturday. Here's the run-down:

POVICH

"Against Indiana he turned Steve Sitko loose for three touchdowns. The next week the University of Washington had Leahy's backs pretty well covered, so his end, Leon Hart, scores twice—once on a pass and once on an end-around play. Against Purdue it was Sitko breaking loose again for three more scores.

"Downing Tulane, Larry Coutre turned up as the guy. He romped to three touchdowns in the first 10 minutes, and the ball game was over. Here today, it's neither Sitko, Hart or Coutre. It's Ernie Zalejski, a halfback he's been keeping under cover for two years."

INCONSISTENCY is indeed a charm in the case of the Irish. And Leahy admitted his pleasure that Zalejski was the latest hero of the Irish. He said so after the game, in the dressing room. "I'm only sorry," said the Notre Dame coach, "that Jim Costin didn't live to see Zalejski break away for those three touchdowns today."

Costin, the late sports editor of the South Bend Tribune, died within the past year after chronicling the deeds of Notre Dame teams for 30 seasons. Young Zalejski, born in South Bend and the only town kid on the varsity squad, was Costin's pet. Since the lad was starring in high school, Costin had trumpeted the certain fame of Zalejski on Notre Dame teams.

The Polish lad had been hampered by injuries last year and previously this season. But he didn't let Costin down against the Midshipmen. Twice he took long passes from Bob Williams for touchdowns, and a third time he scored on a 76-yard razzle-dazzle jaunt through tackle that surpassed in thrills even the 91-yard dash of Larry Coutre.

LEAHY'S PRESENT Notre Dame backfield is in the best tradition of Irish backs. As usual he has a superb quarterback in Bob Williams, the Baltimore boy, whom Leahy now rates ahead of the redoubtable Angelo Bartelli and last year's Frank Tripucka. In fact, Leahy has broken down in private conversations to declare that only Johnny Lujack among Notre Dame quarterbacks was superior to Williams.

And as usual, the Irish have come up with backs who pack both leg drive and speed. They're a disarming pair, Sitko and Coutre, the one 5 feet 8 inches, the other only an inch taller, and they don't meet the popular conception of backs who can leg it, but they can, after using their sheer power to get across the scrimmage line. And neither is Zalejski any giant.

There was a discussion about Notre Dame backs after the game. Arch Ward opined that the man who makes the regular Irish backfield must essentially be a great one. "There's so much competition for the jobs at South Bend among so many good football players. The fellows Leahy ultimately selects must have that extra something, and usually it's both leg drive and speed plus a wonderful determination."

BUT THERE IS a penalty for that kind of superiority. The Irish may be playing themselves out of competition. Already such as Michigan and Army are giving them a wide berth in the schedule making. Tulane has announced it will have no more of Notre Dame after the end of the present pact. The Irish simply are too good, and the team that plays them risks having its season blighted by an overwhelming defeat.

It may be unfair to observe that Notre Dame didn't go all out against Navy, but there for all to see was the obvious fact that the Irish threw no passes at all in the second half, after demonstrating that it could complete five out of seven in the first two quarters, two of them for easy touchdowns.

Only Notre Dame, though, could have beaten Navy, 40-0, on Saturday. The Middies were a good football team despite their defeat. For the first 20 minutes they actually outrushed the Irish, tore the Notre Dame line to shreds before bogging down in scoring territory. Navy was licked, but it never surrendered. The Middies played it to the hilt, and for Navy men it was heartening. There's new hope in that business with Army on November 26.

86,080 See Rams' Rally Beat Bears By 27 to 24

Los Angeles, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams today hammered and passed the Chicago Bears into submission, 27 to 24, in a wild battle witnessed by the largest and perhaps the loudest crowd ever to watch a National League game. The attendance was 86,080.

The Rams came from behind in the final five minutes to win after a series of exciting action.

Trailing, 24-20, after leading all the way, little Tom (Cricket) Kalmanir took a Bear kickoff and raced it back 57 yards.

The Rams caught fire and went on to the Bear 17 with Bob Waterfield turning in perhaps his greatest game under pressure.

STATISTICS

| 49 | Punting average | 46 |
| 96 | Total yards all kicks returned | 85 |
| 1 | Opponent fumbles recovered | 2 |
| 103 | Yards lost by penalties | 67 |

The Bears were called for a pass interference, John Hoffman on V. T. Smith, and from the 1-yard line Fullback Gerry Cowhig crashed over for the winning touchdown.

Trailing 20-10, the Bears paraded 80 yards in 13 plays and edged closer to the Rams, 17-20, after Julie Rykovich scored from the 2.

The major drama then began to unfold, with seven minutes left. Lujack connected with a long pass to Ken Kavanaugh and the play went for 43 yards and sent the Bears ahead, 24-20.

The bears kicked off and Kalmanir raced down the sidelines 57 yards.

Waterfield from the Bear 35 passed to Tom Fears for 10, Cowhig ground out 8 yards, and then came the pass interference in the end zone called on Hoffman. From the 1 Cowhig went over.

The loss was the Bears' third of the campaign, the second this fall to the title-bent Rams.

The crowd eclipsed the official league record of 69,631 set in the Ram game here with the Chicago Cardinals in 1947, and also passed the unofficial league record of an estimated 73,000 who saw Red Grange and these same Bears play the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds in New York in 1925.

In addition, Waterfield kicked two field goals, from the 33 and 22 yard marks, hit Hirsch with a touchdown strike and turned in a 46-yard punting average.

His first field goal started the scoring, and it didn't end until darkness settled over the huge crowd.

George Blanda's field goal from the 37-yard stripe tied the count in the first quarter.

The next two Ram touchdowns were the result of a Bear fumble by J. R. Boone deep in his own side of the field, and a pass interception by Gabby Sims on a Lujack pass and Sims' 27-yard return to the Bear 15. It took the Rams seven plays to batter through the Bear stronghold, but Dick Hoerner finally made it from the 1-foot distance.

Hoerner early in the third was carried from the Coliseum on a stretcher, suffering from a slight head concussion. This materially handicapped the Ram running attack and forced Waterfield almost exclusively into the air.

Hoerner's arch foe this afternoon, End Ed Sprinkle, also was forced out of the game in the final period.

"MAMMY"—If Al Jolson were a football player he'd probably strike a "Mammy" pose such as Nick Scollard, of the New York Bulldogs, is doing trying to catch a pass against the Redskins yesterday. Scollard was all set to haul in the aerial, but Clyde Goodnight (38) of the Redskins knocked the ball down. Dan Sandifer (20) Redskins halfback, is hanging around just in case the job was too big for Goodnight. The teams battled to a 14-14 tie before only 3678 fans

Whelchel's Boys Fail To Capture 'Must' Game

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 30.—Some sort of all-time record for futility was set by the Washington Redskins here today as they tied the New York Bulldogs, 14-14, in a so-what game at the Polo Grounds.

Rare judgment was shown by New York football fans, only 3678 of them turning out for what must rank as one of the worst games of all time. It was the smallest crowd to see a Redskin game since 1939.

As it turned out the Redskins, a 14-point favorite, were glad to settle for a tie. They overcame a one-touchdown Bulldog lead in the second quarter, went ahead by 14-7 in the third period, and then collapsed to allow the winless Bulldogs to knot the count for good early in the final session.

'Must' Game For Whelchel

If the outcome didn't end the pro coaching career of the Redskins' head coach, Billick Whelchel, friends of owner George Marshall will be amazed. This was the game the Tribe had to win if Whelchel, after coaching only six games in the National Football League, expected to survive any part of his five-year contract with the Redskins.

The "best material in Redskin history," as Marshall called it before the season started, found itself on the short end of the score with less than six minutes of the game elapsed. It took that long for the Bulldogs, with Texas Bobby Layne in charge, to march 76 yards for a touchdown.

Layne's toss to Nick Scollard was good for 34 yards to the Redskin 6, and from there the former Chicago Bear reserve whipped one to Joe Golding for the score. Scollard kicked the point and Washington, seeking its third victory in six games, trailed by 7-0.

The Redskins made two futile threats, both times to within four yards of the Bulldog end zone, before they could retaliate. They finally deadlocked matters in the second period with an 80-yard rush, accomplished in just five plays.

Sammy Baugh's pass to Hugh Taylor was good for 28 yards to midfield, and after one heave for no gain, Baugh passed again to Taylor for the last 44 yards. Harold Prescott had a chance to knock the pass out of Taylor's hands but missed and Dick Poillon tied it up at 7-7 with a perfect placement.

From then until midway of the third period neither team could do much about the stalemate. The Redskins finally moved under Baugh's urging from the Bulldog 36, where Dan Sandifer was dropped on a punt runback, to

Eagles Rout Steelers, Take Over 1st Place

Pittsburgh, Oct. 30 (AP).—The power-packed Philadelphia Eagles wrecked the Pittsburgh Steelers today, 38-7, before 37,903 stunned fans.

The result broke a deadlock between the clubs and gave the Eagles undisputed possession of the top spot in the National Football League's Eastern division.

Bitter feeling between the clubs exploded into an outburst of illegal infighting which saw each club lose two players for fisticuffs in a penalty-marred third quarter.

The Eagles stepped into a 3-0 lead in 3.36 of the first period on Cliff Patton's 48-yard field goal and were in command the rest of the way. They scored in every period, running up two touchdowns each in the second and final quarters.

The Eagles owned a 24-0 lead before the Steelers finally hit pay dirt in the third period on a pass from Halfback Jim Finks to Val Jansante for 35 yards.

Steeler strategy which dictated a quick kick near the end of the first period exploded and set up the first Eagle T. D. Guard Duke Maronic blocked the boot on the 20 and End John Green recovered on the 1. Van Buren bored through guard for the score as the second period opened.

Joe Nuha, taking over the conversion duties for Patton after Patton was forced out by a hip bruise, kicked the placement and was successful on four more tries.

Clyde (Smackover) Scott raced 70 yards with a punt for the next Eagle touchdown with only 2:06 of the second period gone.

Van Buren cut loose in the second half to spearhead an 80-yard Eagle march.

He cracked over guard from six yards out after chewing off 35 of the 80 yards in a series of running plays.

After the Steelers scored to make the count, 24-7, Philadelphia burst loose again in the final period with Frank Ziegler taking over the ground-gaining chore in a 51-yard march. Ziegler lugged the ball in six of seven plays to the Steeler one from where Quarterback Tommy Thompson bounced over on a quarterback sneak.

The final Eagle score was set up on a pass interception by Frank Reagan which he carried from the Eagle 46 to the Steeler 26 where he flipped a lateral to Maronic who nudged forward another yard. After one running play, Quarterback Bill Mackrides passed 17 yards to End Pete Pihos for the touchdown.

The Eagles lost Walter Barnes and Chuck Bednarik, and the Steelers saw Frank Wydo and Charley Mehelich ousted in the third period rough play.

Hoya Fullback Hughes Resting Comfortably

Johnny Hughes, Georgetown's fullback who was injured in last Saturday's game against Fordham, is "resting comfortably" at Union Hospital in New York and probably will rejoin the Hoya squad in a few games.

Hughes suffered a head injury which at first was feared to be a concussion but X-rays made yesterday were negative, Coach Bob Margarita reported. The rest of the squad was pretty well battered. Margarita added, and as a consequence this week's practice probably will be devoid of contact work. Georgetown plays Villanova Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

Bullis Loses At Rochester

By Howard Flieger, Jr.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Before 19,452 spectators Bullis Prep went down to defeat, 19-7, at the hands of Aquinas Institute here today.

Playing inspired ball in the second half, Bullis held the Little Irish to 9 yards, although Quarterback Jimmy Burns scored the third Aquinas touchdown from the Bullis 2-yard line in the third quarter. Early in the fourth period Dick Olson recovered a fumble by Joe Alvaggio of Aquinas on the Little Irish 16. Then Dick King, working from the quarterback slot, carried Bullis to the 6-inch line where he cracked over on fourth down.

Scoring in the first and second periods, Pete Biocca sparked Aquinas to its fifth straight victory. Biocca scored his first touchdown from the Bullis 8-yard line, climaxing a drive of 73 yards. Biocca added his second touchdown near the end of the second period sweeping around right end from the Bullis 6. Fritz Amico's placement was good and at halftime the score stood at 13-0.

Aquinas scored in the third period when James Campagna on the Bullis 35 took a Bullis punt by Ed Cashman and returned it to the 21. A clipping penalty moved Aquinas to the Bullis 6, where Burns went over for the final touchdown. Amico's extra point was low.

Tittle Stars, But Colts Lose, 21-14

New York, Oct. 30 (AP) — New York's Yankees squeaked through with a 21 to 14 victory over Baltimore today and stayed on top of the All-America Football Conference standings.

All the Colts' points came in a torrid third quarter.

New York romped to three easy touchdowns before the intermission but every Yankee follower among the 10,692 paying customers was happy the game was over after Y. A. Tittle, Colt quarterback, put on his passing exhibition after the rest.

During the third stanza, the former LSU star completed 10 consecutive passes, pitching for both touchdowns within four minutes. First he threw to Bill Stone on a 17-yard scoring play. The second went to John North, this one for 16 yards.

The Colts recovered Tom Landry's fumble on the 24 to set up the second marker. Their first score, however, came at the end of a 92-yard journey. A Tittle to Lamar Davis pass ate up 38 yards in one play.

Terp-GW Southern Conference Clash Dominated by Yankees

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IF the band strikes up "Dixie" at Saturday's Maryland-George Washington football game, very few of the football players will recognize it. . . . Only 9 of G. W.'s 41 players and 14 of Maryland's 51 are from the South. Yet it's a Southern Conference battle. . . . Southern Conference teams, incidentally, should stay in their own backyard. . . . They've won only six of 20 nonleague games this season. Duke has the best record with triumphs over Tennessee and Georgia Tech in its two nonleague frays.

RAY KROUSE has gained such widespread reputation for his great play that the Maryland tackle may soon find himself out of work. . . . He complained to Line Coach Jack Hennemier at halftime Saturday that South Carolina "has run only one play on my side of the line so far, coach, and I'd like to know if it's O. K. to make tackles on the other side of the line?" Hennemier gave him permission. . . . Who says you can't mention little Washington and Lee in the same breath with mighty Army? Didn't the Generals beat Davidson by 13 points more than the Cadets did?. . . .

GEORGETOWN not only showed a six-touchdown deficit in the fourth quarter of the Fordham game, but the Hoyas were also in arrears in left tackles and guards. With 10 minutes to play, Coach Bob Margarita could muster only one of each and if either of these was hurt Bob was prepared to slip into the lineup himself. . . . What a fibber Duke's Wallace Wade is! In September he insisted his Blue Devils were "at least two years away" but today the record shows five successes in six starts. . . . There's trouble ahead next Saturday, however, in the resurgent Deacons of Wake Forest. . . .

Brooklyn Roller Team Wins Series From D. C., 6 to 5

Coach Ken Monte's only point of the evening, scored with 12 seconds left, gave his Brooklyn Bombers a 16-15 victory over the Washington - Baltimore Wildcats and the series, six games to five, in the final Roller Derby competition of the season last night at the Uline Arena before 4051 spectators.

It was Brooklyn's fifth win in the last six nights. At one time they trailed one game to four in the 11-game series.

Washington-Baltimore's Chuck Davis enlivened the proceedings when he protested too strenuously to Referee Russ Schalk over a penalty and began pushing the official. He was fined $25 and thrown out of the game. The fans showed their disapproval by throwing paper cups and peanuts onto the track.

End-Around Play Illegal as Used by Hart Of Notre Dame; Sports Editor Contends

Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 30 (AP). The end-around play with which Leon Hart of Notre Dame devastates opponents is illegal, Sports Editor Bud Preston of the Wenatchee Daily World said today.

Preston began sleuthing the play when arbiters clamped down on Wenatchee High School early this season, ruling the play illegal as used.

When the massive Hart scored against Washington on the end-around in Seattle, Preston said, the play was the same as used by Wenatchee High School. Hart slanted out from his position and took a forward hand-off from the quarterback, then cut through the line to the goal. (In a legal end-around the ball is handed backward to the circling end).

Curious as to whether college interpretation differed on the rule, Preston wrote A. R. Hutchens, secretary of the college football rules committee. He said Hutchens replied that "unless the end faces his own end (goal) line before receiving the ball, the play violates 7-1-5 (handing the ball forward) rule in the college rule book."

The end must make a full 180-degree turn in coming out of the line to make the play legal, Preston said Hutchens advised him.

Leahy Surprised Play Questioned

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 30 (AP).—Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame heard with obvious astonishment today that the legality of big Leon Hart's end-around runs has been questioned.

"I've never heard it questioned before," Leahy commented. "Every team uses it if they have an end who can run like Hart."

San Francisco Routs Nevada

San Francisco, Oct. 30 (AP).—Scoring in every period, the University of San Francisco defeated the University of Nevada, 41-13, today.

Canadeo Star

Green Bay Beats Out Lions, 16-14

By Chris Edmonds

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 30 (AP).—Gray-thatched Tony Canadeo ripped off yardage in huge chunks today to lead the Green Bay Packers to a 16-14 victory over the Detroit Lions in a National Football League game before a slim crowd of 10,855 at State Fair Park.

Canadeo tore through and around the Lion line for 117 yards in 21 carries for a fat 5.6 average to pull the Packers out of the western division basement. The old "Gray Ghost of Gonzaga" slammed 9 yards for the first Packer touchdown in the third period which gave Green Bay a 9-7 lead.

The Packers grabbed an early lead when Ted Fritsch booted a 46-yard field goal with four minutes gone in the game.

With Bill Dudley, Camp Wilson and Bill Triplett doing most of the toting, the Lions drove 101 yards from the following kickoff with Dudley counting on a 4-yard shot around end and then kicking the point.

Green Bay bounced into the lead in the third period, driving 98 yards after Jack Jacobs intercepted one of Clyde Le Force's passes on the Packer 2. Canadeo and Bob Forte did most of the lugging, although two passes by Earl (Jug) Girard helped. Fritsch missed the point.

A Detroit gamble on the Packer 46 as the fourth quarter opened cost the clinching touchdown. Le Force elected to pass on fourth down and the ball fell incomplete. Canadeo and Forte picked up yardage to the Detroit 22, where Girard whipped a long pass to Ted Cook in the end zone. Fritsch didn't miss this time and the Packers led, 16-7, with 10 minutes to play.

72,189 See Champions Get Revenge

By Fritz Howell

Cleveland, Oct. 30 (AP).—"Golden-toe" Lou Groza's 38-yard placekick provided the victory margin today as the thrice champion Cleveland Browns defeated the San Francisco Forty-niners, 30-28, in an All-America Conference grid game before 72,189 fans.

The Cleveland win avenged an earlier 56-28 loss to the Forty-niners, only team to beat the champs in their last 32 starts.

The scrap featured a personal duel between the rival quarterbacks who shared the league's most valuable player award last season—automatic Otto Graham of the Browns and southpaw Frankie Albert of the Forty-niners.

They broke about even, each passing for two touchdowns and scoring once on a sneak play

The Browns lost a touchdown in the scoreless opening quarter when a penalty nullified Graham's 1-foot plunge into the end zone and set the stage for an 88-yard scoring march by San Francisco.

The visitors moved the ball to Ohio's 48 on runs by Verl Lillywhite, Joe Perry and Albert as the period ended. On the first play of the second session Albert hit Len Ashmont with a pass on the 27 and he went on in for a touchdown. Joe Vetrano booted the first of his four extra points and the Forty-niners were off in front.

That set off a scoring splurge of four touchdowns in seven minutes, each club getting two. Dub Jones carried the next kickoff back 64 yards, then the Browns moved 28 yards in five plays with Graham hitting Dante Lavelli with a nine-yard toss to tie the score at 7-7.

Albert pitched the '49ers right back into the lead, hurling perfectly to Stan Cathcart, freshman back, for 72 yards to the Browns' seven. From there, Lillywhite plunged over. Back came the Browns with a seven-play sprint which covered 80 yards, Jones plunging six for the touchdown.

Graham came up with his 20-yard sneak play to climax a 67-yard Brownie march at the start of the third quarter.

The 49ers moved 35 yards on the first two plays of the final session to knot it again at 21-21, as Albert passed 13 and 22 yards to End Alyn Beals, the second for the touchdown.

A pass interference penalty, plus Graham's 30-yard heave to Lavelli, moved the Browns to the 49ers' 32, and that's where Groza came up with his game-deciding three-pointer. He booted it from the 38-yard line.

The Browns put it on ice with a 77-yard march in 10 plays, with Graham passing 11 to Speedie for the payoff. The surge was featured by Horace Gillom's circus catch of Graham's 28-yard aerial.

Undaunted, the San Franciscans rolled 80 yards in nine plays, finally sending Albert a yard on a sneak play for the final score.

Canisius Upsets St. Bonaventure In 2d Meeting, 14-0

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 30 (AP).—An underdog Canisius football team turned "spoiler" today and upset St. Bonaventure, 14-0, with Howie Willis and Chet Kwasek, a pair of pint-sized halfbacks, doing the scoring.

It was a complete reversal of form from the first meeting of the clubs in Olean two weeks ago. St. Bonaventure took that one with ease, 46-13.

But this was the big one. It virtually assured Canisius of its third consecutive Western New York Little Three title. Canisius still must beat Niagara, but will be a top-heavy favorite when the teams meet a week from today.

Colts Lose To Yankees

28 passes, with 17 hitting their targets. They netted 216 yards.

The Yankees did virtually all their advancing along the ground. Sherman Howard, rookie back from Nevada, burst over his own left guard for 51 yards and the first touchdown midway in the opening stanza.

Bob Kennedy converted a 40-yard march with a 2-yard scoring blast in the second and then Dan Panciera hit Jack Russell with a rare Yankee pass from 42 yards out for another tally.

Harvey Johnson converted all three to run his string to 94 in a row.

The Colts threatened constantly in the final period in hope of averting their eight defeats in nine starts but couldn't make it.

The triumph was the fifth in a row for the Yankees who share the loop top with Cleveland. The New Yorkers have won six out of seven while the Browns have six victories, one defeat and a tie.

Bunn, Milan Turner Ring Headliners

Sonny Boy Bunn, 19-year-old local welterweight, tangles with Charlie Milan, Baltimore headliner, tonight at Turner's Arena in the featured 10-rounder.

Bunn attracted national attention two weeks ago in Hartford, Conn., when he figured in a referee's reversal of decision. The referee, sole judge in Hartford, first awarded the decision to Johnny Cesario, New England's top welterweight, but later changed the decision to a draw.

Milan, scored an upset win over Johnny Williams, New York slugger, two weeks ago at the Arena, in his first bout after being out nine months with a broken jaw suffered in a bout with Freddie Dawson, No. 1 welterweight challenger.

Herbie (Biff) Jones, local southpaw, takes on Jay White, New York, in the eight-round semiwind-up. Roland Randall faces Baltimore's Sugar Boy Watkins, Mose Herald meets Walter Hamm, Billy Caufield takes on Jimmy Briscoe, and Jaimmie O'Brien and K. O. Robinson tangle in preliminary fours.

Hirohito Calls O'Doul Greatest Manager in Game

Tokyo, Oct. 30 (AP) — Lefty O'Doul met the Emperor today, and came away with a super-duper compliment ringing in his ears.

"It is a great honor to meet the greatest manager in baseball," said Emperor Hirohito, looking up at the husky manager of the San Francisco Seals.

O'Doul, whose club finished seventh in the Pacific Coast League last season and is now on an exhibition tour of Japan, replied, "I've waited a long time for this day."

O'Doul has been in Japan five times since 1931, but this was his first audience with the Emperor.

DEAR FOLKS: AT PIMLICO.

Two stakes will be decided this week here with the twenty-seventh running of the Pimlico Futurity as the chief attraction. The mile and a sixteenth test is set for Saturday, while on Thursday the twelfth running of the Battleship Steeplechase Handicap will be the feature at 2 miles. It appears that as many as a dozen 2-year-olds may compete in the Futurity although the size of the field may depend to some extent on racing early this week. Bed O'Roses, the Vanderbilt star, is not eligible and this leaves the Futurity as a wide open race. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Giants Rally, Halt Cards By 41 to 38

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—The New York Giants erased a three-touchdown deficit in the second half for a thrilling 41-38 victory over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League game witnessed by 21,339 at Comiskey Park today.

The Giants overcame a 28-7 halftime lag and then, with four minutes left, erased a 38-34 Cardinal lead with a 5-yard plunge by Joe Scott after a 68-yard pass from Chuck Conerly to Gene Roberts.

The triump moved the Giants into a second-place tie with the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Eastern Division, each with four wins and two defeats. The Steelers today lost to the Philadelphia Eagles, 38-7.

The New York club, making its second Comiskey Park league appearance since 1930, turned the tide with three third period touchdowns, two coming within two minutes after the intermission kickoff.

Roberts smashed for two touchdown and his running, along with Conerly's passing, spoiled the Cardinal head coaching debut of Buddy Parker. Last week, the Cardinals broke up their co-coaching combination of Parker and Phil Handler, the latter being moved into the club vice presidency.

New York's only first half score came on an 11-yard flip from Conerly to Bill Swiacki.

But Jack Salscheider took the second half kick-off back 95 yards for a touchdown. Little more than a minute later, End Frank Lovuolo grabbed Charley Trippi's fumble and ambled 25 yards for another Giant touchdown.

Then a third straight New York score came on Roberts' 1-yard smash to cap a 63-yard Giant march which reduced the Cardinal lead to 28-27.

The Cardinals played it safe near the end of the third stanza with Ventan Yablonski's 27-yard field goal for a 31-27 margin.

But at the outset of the fourth quarter, the Giants zoomed 64 yards for their fifth touchdown, Roberts ranging across from the 1-foot line, giving New York the lead for the first time, 34-31.

Angsman's second touchdown, on a 26-yard run, moved Chicago in front 38-34, but then came New York's lightning strike for its sixth score of the long Conerly-to-Roberts pass and Scott's pay-off plunge.

3678 Watch Redskins Tie Bulldogs, 14-All

a lead which lasted just about five minutes.

Leon Cochran did most of the running, and he caught a 17-yard pass from Baugh to move down to the Bulldog 11. From there it took five plays to get the ball over with Cochran accounting for the last yard on a smash off right tackle. Poillon converted to make it 14-7, favoring the Redskins.

The final period was less than 1½ minutes old when Layne brought the Bulldogs up even and gave them their best effort after five straight losses. For a minute it appeared that Washington was about to insure its lead when Pete Stout intercepted a Layne pass and ran it to the Redskin 42.

But three plays later Johnny Rauch, former Georgia great, stepped in the way of a Baugh pass and the weak threat ended just 2 yards from where it started—on the Redskin 40.

Layne, who completed 11 of his 20 aerials for 157 yards, got off one bad pass from that point. His second attempt, however, was the most important of the ball game—for the Bulldogs. Scollard was running along the side line when he caught Lyne's pass and all he had to do was twist away from Sandifer on the end of a 40-yard pass play.

Scollard then came up with the all-important fourteenth point on a placement.

The Redskins' most important try at breaking the tie came shortly afterward when Baugh hurled 37 yards to Hal Crisler on the Bulldog 34. Crisler made the mistake of trying a lateral to Eddie Saenz, however, and Jim Wade stepped in and grabbed the ball.

Instead of a first down on the Bulldog 34, the Redskins lost the ball and shortly thereafter Scollard tried what might have been the game-winning field goal from 39 yards out.

It was short, as were the Redskins' running and passing efforts from there on. The game ended with Washington trying to pass out of trouble from its own 25.

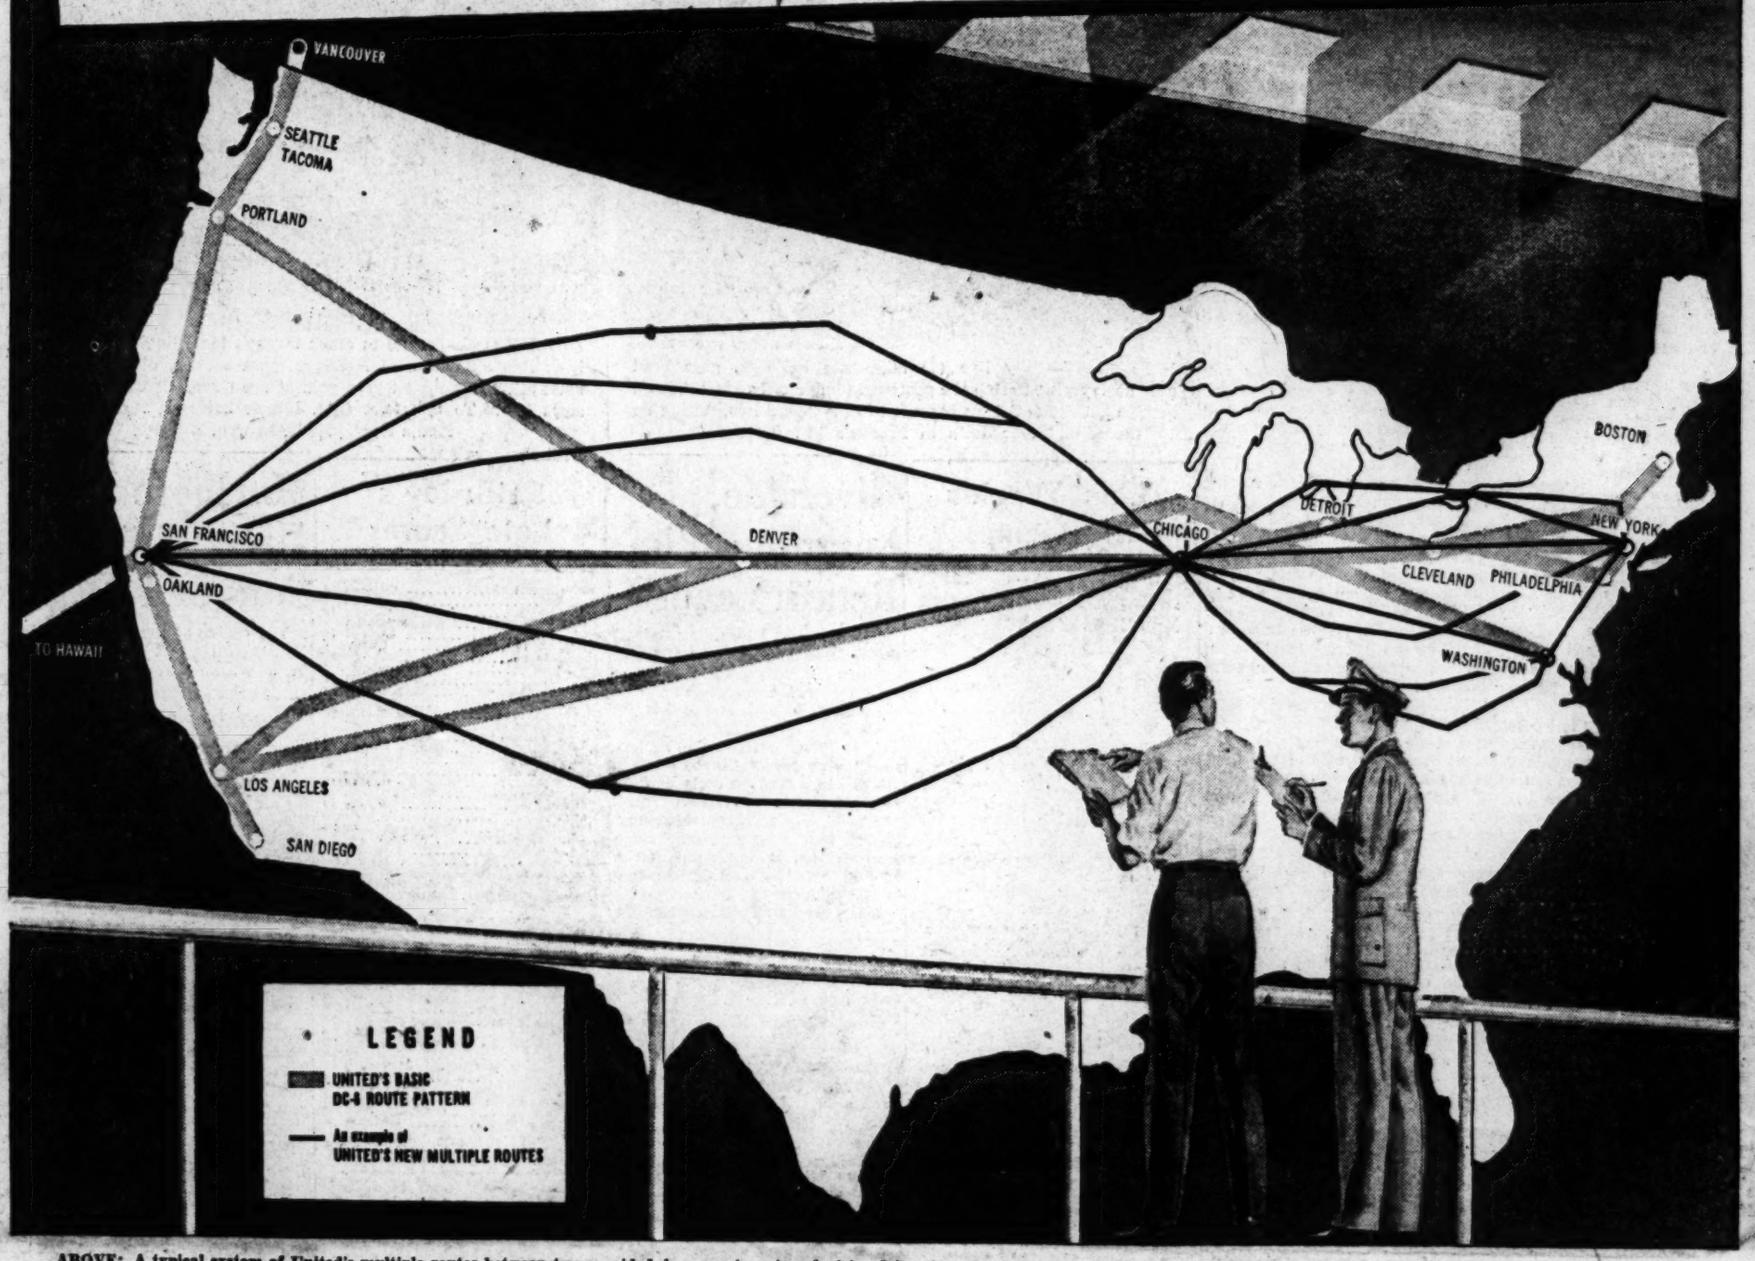
United's new multiple-route airways give you greater year-round dependability



ABOVE: A typical system of United's multiple routes between two terminals. These are actually "highways in the sky," accurately marked by radio signal paths. From a wide choice of such long-range DC-6 routes serving principal cities on United's system, one or more will almost always be open. United's pilots and dispatchers, aided by expert meteorologists, determine the best route to fly when preparing the trip flight plan prior to departure. For example, if the best route to San Francisco happens to be through the southern country on a certain day—then that's the route United flies. In doing so United takes advantage of favorable winds and the reserve power of the DC-6 to get you there with greater schedule dependability despite the greater distance flown. On the next day, the direct mid-continent route may have better weather. And during your flight, your Mainliner pilot keeps you informed through the plane's public address system.

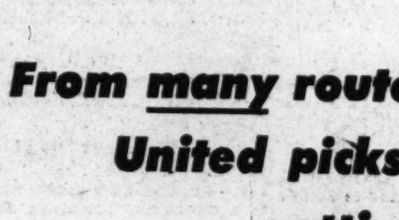
From many routes available to the long-range DC-6 Mainliner 300, United picks the one where weather is most favorable for getting you there in comfort and on schedule!

For 23 years, United—the pioneer coast-to-coast airline—has been working to give you more and more schedule dependability.

The DC-6 Mainliner 300 made possible a tremendous step forward. For it gives United the range to fly around weather, the altitude to fly over weather, the reserve power to fly alternate routes within schedule times—a new "freedom of the sky!"

Now United offers you a new concept of reliable, all-season flying, proved by the fact that United's on-schedule performance has improved 33% within the past year! We cannot expect to make a 100% record of on-time performance; no transportation system has ever been able to. But our improvement is steady—this winter our record will be better than ever before.

United flies over the weather—The pressurized cabin of the DC-6 Mainliner 300 assures passenger-comfort even at 16,000 feet or higher, at smoother flight levels.



It may be raining or snowing on the ground, but your Mainliner climbs swiftly up and through the overcast to the sunshine or starlight level. On the average, sunshine is only 15 minutes away.

United flies around the weather—The DC-6 Mainliner 300 has a range of well over 3000 miles. With its ample reserve power it can fly around the weather using alternate airways—and still arrive on time.

United uses the newest electronic aids Radio range stations provide a network of beams which mark every airway. No matter which route is chosen, your Mainliner is always precision-flown. And new electronic aids—including the Instrument Landing System and Precision Beam Radar—permit Mainliners to land on schedule under conditions of visibility that formerly "closed in" airports. ILS, illustrated above, provides an electronic "highway" descending gently from the sky to the runway.

United's Operations Control Center monitors your flight—At Denver, the progress of all flights over United's 10,700-mile system is monitored. Weather reports, not only from ground stations all over the country, but from planes in flight as well, provide an accurate, up-to-the-minute picture of flying conditions everywhere.

United's experience—United has flown more than 12 million passengers over 6 billion passenger-miles. From this background come seasoned, highly trained men and women—including veteran pilots who have been flying for years under all conditions. These are the all-important people who make the system work!

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN TO YOU? JUST THIS!

Year-round air travel is here. No longer need you forego the speed and economy of flying because weather "looks bad" to you. Now you can FLY UNITED with a new assurance of comfortable, dependable travel the year around.

Sunshine is only 15 minutes away!

New Slashes in Army, Navy Civilian Forces Talked at Pentagon

Over at the Pentagon, there are rumblings of a new reduction of Army and Navy civilian personnel.

A Defense official said he expects to see additional Navy civilians on the West Coast laid off as more Navy ships are moved to the Atlantic. He also said reductions were in the cards for a few Army installations.

The official explained that Defense Secretary Johnson was determined to withhold upward of 800 million dollars during this fiscal year in funds appropriated by Congress for the Army, Navy and Air Force. If the military agencies could spend all the money approved for them by Congress they would hire instead of fire employes. The Air Force, for example, would need more civilians if it were built up to 58 groups as authorized by Congress.

Approximately 25,000 military employes will be shifted to the payroll of the new military assistance program. Otherwise, they would be laid off.

But now that annual appropriation bills for all the agencies have been approved, personnel freezes in many agencies have been lifted and it's a safe bet that the employment trend already has turned upward.

Anacostia Bridge at Mass. Ave. Proposed

Planning Group Gives Rebuttal to Highway Body's Capitol St. Plan

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday presented its case for a new Anacostia River bridge at Massachusetts ave. se. instead of at E. Capitol st.

In so doing, NCPPC gave a point-by-point rebuttal to the recent District Highway Department's Anacostia bridge study, indorsed by the Bureau of Public Roads, which concluded that a span in line with E. Capitol st. would better serve the traffic needs of population-swollen Anacostia.

The Federal planners implied that the future bridge proposals from the District Building were impractical, would disrupt the city's comprehensive thoroughfare plan and were based upon questionable traffic and population "assumptions."

High Costs Hit

The nine-page NCPPC bridge report estimated cost of the Massachusetts ave. span at six million dollars, and pointed out that estimates for the E. Capitol st. crossing run as high as 12 millions.

Should it become necessary later to provide additional Anacostia River spans north of the present Benning bridge, NCPPC recommended the proposed Lower Baltimore - Washington Parkway bridge, near the end of M st. extended and Maryland ave. ne. and the proposed Fort Drive crossing, near South Dakota ave. ne., entering the District at the northeast corner of the Arboretum.

These northerly bridges, it was explained, would share the traffic on the planned Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the Annapolis Freeway.

NCPPC estimated the three above bridges could be built for about the same amount as the 12-million-dollar E. Capitol st. span.

The District planners, on the other hand, take a different look into the future.

They recommend for construction sometime between 1953 and 1961 a relief span between the existing 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. bridges, and for the area north of Benning Bridge, the proposed Baltimore-Washington Parkway span at New York ave. extended.

Combined Traffic Aid

The latter bridge would thus serve the combined traffic of the Baltimore - Washington Parkway and the Annapolis Freeways, a proposition which NCPPC planning director John Nolen, jr., said was "poor planning."

The NCPPC report said the E. Capitol st. bridge proposal has these "ramifications":

"1. It defers indefinitely, if not permanently, the Massachusetts ave. bridge.

"2. It proposes to channel the combined traffic on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the Annapolis Freeway across the New York ave. bridge, thereby forcing the Constitution ave. connection through the Arboretum.

"3. It implies the elimination of the Fort Drive Bridge, as a vital link in this inner circumferential route.

"4. It also proposes to eliminate the previous planned Baltimore-Washington Parkway crossing connection to Constitution ave. by construction of a route through the Arboretum.

"5. It proposes for the first time a new bridge between Pennsylvania ave. and 11th st. bridges, without having considered any of the approach problems.

"6. It not only changes the Thorofare Plan in each of the foregoing instances, but also the functional characteristics of much of this plan for the eastern part of the city.

"7. It divides the Sports Center (proposed in Anacostia Park at the foot of E. Capitol st.) into several segments separated by high embankments and the large volumes of through traffic.

"8. It bottlenecks Kingman Lake, materially changing its original concept in the Anacostia Park plan and its usefulness as a facility for Sports Center activities or any other purpose."

Similar to the Sports Center consideration on the E. Capitol bride site, several District Building officials say they don't like NCPPC's Massachusetts ave. site because its District approaches would run too close to Gallinger Hospital.

NCPPC emphasized that the Highway Department's bridge conclusions hinged too much upon questionable cold statistical computations with too little regard for basic city-wide planning principles.

The Federal planners specifically challenged the Highway Departments estimated population and automobile ownership figures projected to the year 1980.

The Highway Department guesses that population in the area on both sides of the Anacostia River will jump 139 percent by 1980. NCPPC guesses the growth at 86 percent.

NCPPC also estimates that

2 Slug Woman Western Union Manager, Rob Branch of $268

The Washington Post

MRS. ELIZABETH ATHA
. . . in Casualty Hospital

Mrs. Elizabeth Atha, 24, a Western Union branch office manager, was in Casualty Hospital yesterday with head injuries suffered earlier in the day when she was robbed and slugged by two men as she closed her office. She was reported in good condition.

Mrs. Atha told police that shortly after midnight Sunday as she locked the branch office at 3027 Nichols ave. se., two men stepped up and one pressed a hard object, which she later saw was a gun, into her ribs.

She said they forced her to open the office again, enter, and that "they had evidently been watching because they said they knew I worked there all the time and knew that I knew the combination of the safe."

The two first held matches for her to work the combination, she said, but later directed her to find a flashlight, which she did. They took $251 in currency and about $17 in coins, she said.

Afterward, they directed her to a washroom, instructed her "not to yell for 10 minutes." One of them then slugged her with the gun, she said, and she screamed involuntarily. She was then struck twice more, she said, and left in the washroom. She was able to summon police after the men left.

Mrs. Atha described the robbers as Negroes, about 25 years old, one taller than the other. The taller one, she said, appeared to be the leader, and called the other one "William."

Mrs. Atha lives with her husband, Henry F. Atha, who is an FBI clerk, at 3117 Nicholas ave. se., about a block from her office.

Trio Holds Up Hotel Here

vates Mode and Carpenter spotted a woman with a bright red coat and a snood scarf at 12th and K sts. nw. They stopped and questioned her.

She turned out to be the Maze woman. They said she admitted the robbery, and said she had left the other two in the cab at 12th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

At that moment, an American Cab Co. driver saw the street-corner colloquy and stopped. He told the officers he had driven the woman they were questioning, and two other persons. He said he had taken the other passengers to the Palm Grove Club, at 14th and Q sts. nw.

Police asked that the cab driver's name be withheld.

Privates Mode and Carpenter radioed to headquarters with the information. Lieut. Edgar E. Scott and Detective Sergts. James Powell and Herman Xander, of the robbery squad, went immediately to the club. They said they "moved in fast" and found the Hamilton woman and Morris at a table.

Beside her on a chair, they said, they found her coat and under it a .32-caliber pistol.

Policeman Got Commendation

The three will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

Private Mode last December was commended by the "Policeman of the Month" committee for obtaining a tip that resulted in arrest, and later conviction, of Crispin Perez, 29-year-old bartender, for the slugging-murder in the Ambassador Hotel of Charles J. Hines, of Madison, Wis.

Last week, Mode and Carpenter caught a man hammering at the safe in the P. O. Visible Lunch, 729 N. Capitol st., early in the morning.

Transit Music Hearing May End Today

Public hearings before the Public Utilities Commission of the controversial subject of mobile music in Capital Transit Co. vehicles will continue today at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

A five-hour session on Thursday as the public hearings began brought out 300 citizens. A second session Friday drew 50 persons.

Today may see the windup of the hearings before James H. Flannagan, PUC chairman, James W. Lauderdale and Lieut. Col. C. H. Whitesill, who will have to decide on the issue.

Aligned with the transit company are Transit Radio, Inc., and Station WWDC-FM, which broadcasts the programs now piped into 213 buses and streetcars.

Franklin S. Pollak, an attorney who is opposing the radio music, commercials and news on the vehicles on his own behalf, said he expected to put on some witnesses today.

Capital Transit is paid $6 a month for each radio-equipped vehicle, and plans to have 1500 vehicles thus equipped if the PUC decides in its favor.

U. S. Stamp Chief for 25 Years, J. M. Smith Will Retire Today

The man who has made more postage stamps than any other in history—and is a favorite lecturer to philatelic societies—is like the shoemaker's barefoot daughter. He doesn't have a stamp collection.

He is John M. Smith, who will retire Monday after 25 years as superintendent of the postage stamp division of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He just never collected stamps.

Was a Fullback

A native Washingtonian, he was educated at Eastern High School and for a time at Georgetown University. Football eligibility rules being different then, he was a fullback in 1908 and 1909. But late in 1908 he entered the bureau and went to work at 6:30 a. m. daily. Then, in the afternoon he hustled out to practice football in the late afternoons. Just where academic classes came in isn't exactly clear.

Dr. H. C. "Curly" Byrd, now president of the University of Maryland, might shed some light on this. He was a classmate of Smith.

The retiring official began as a "skilled helper" in the bureau, which meant a young, muscular, and energetic person who might be called any time to any place in the bureau to do almost anything.

Headed Simplified Setup

Before 1923, he had become foreman in the examining division, which had charge of keeping count of the money and other products of the bureau. In 1923, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon appointed him member of a special committee of six men to reorganize and improve the entire bureau accounting and operations setup. There were five separate postage stamp divisions before that committee. Afterward, there was one, and Smith headed it. He has headed it since.

He lives with his wife at 1417 Newton st. nw. He has no children, but seven brothers and sisters, all in Washington.

Prince Georges Registration Set Tuesday

Registration of new voters will take place in Prince Georges County Tuesday from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. in the regular polling places.

Persons may register who will have lived in the county at least a year prior to the election in November, 1950. The law requiring new residents to file notice of their intention to become citizens a year in advance has been repealed.

Residents who have not voted for five successive years must register again, and those who have changed their addresses must obtain a removal certificate from their old polling place, or from the Board of Election Supervisors in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Md.

New residents should be prepared to show tax bills, utility bills, rent receipts or automobile license registration to show they have lived in the county and State a year.

2 Men Arrested In Cash Payoffs From Machines

One, Now Member Of Prince Georges Jury, Claims Wife Was Changing $5

Arrest of two Prince Georges County men, one a current county juror, on gaming charges Friday and Saturday nights was disclosed by county police yesterday.

Charged with setting up and operating a gaming table, police said, were Herman Crews, 35, 5364 Quincy pl., Bladensburg, owner of a tavern on Defense hwy. at Vista, and Blair L. Hamel, 37, 5425 Riverdale rd., East Riverdale, owner of a general store at that address and now serving as a petit juror in the conuty.

Crews, police said, permitted cash payoffs on five slot machines in his place. Hamel was alleged to have given a cash payoff on a pinball machine in his store, by the arresting officers. "Play-for-pay" machines are illegal in the county.

Say They Collected

Crews was charged shortly before midnight Saturday. Detectives Wilson J. Purdy and Vincent Free said they visited his tavern, played five machines and collected payoffs on all of them. Four of the machines, the detectives said, were the "one-armed bandit" type, while the fifth was an electrically operated "console" model.

Hamel was arrested late Friday by County Police Pvt. J. P. Kearns, who said he observed a customer collect a cash payoff after posting a winning score on a pinball machine.

Hamel yesterday denied the customer had been paid off. He said his wife was giving the customer change for a five-dollar bill at the time Kearns accused her of paying out winnings.

Released Under Bond

Both Crews and Hamel have been released under $500 bond pending hearings. Crews is scheduled to appear in Hyattsville Police Court Thursday at 10 a. m. No date has been set for Hamel's hearing.

Maj. Ralph Brown, Prince Georges County police superintendent, said the arrests "weren't the result of any particular gaming drive." He said county police have been alerted against cash payoffs from slot machines since a law legalizing the devices in the county was declared invalid by Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury last June.

D. C. Murder Rate Check Is Planned

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman of a District Subcommittee to investigate crime in Washington, said yesterday he plans to find out why in 1948 "there were 73 murders in Washington and only 19 in Boston and 29 in Pittsburgh."

Davis' statement came during a radio show, "Viewpoint," broadcast over WQQW at 2 p. m.

Also participating in the program, which centered about crime conditions here, was Henry N. Bliss, cooking utensil company executive and foreman of a District Grand Jury which was retired last October.

Gilbert Hahn, jr., and Carl L. Shipley were moderators.

Davis declared that he was not specifically blaming the Police Department but was leveling his criticism at "law enforcement" here.

He stressed that four agencies are concerned with such enforcement enumerating them as the police, the prosecutor's office, the courts and probation authorities.

Bliss, declaring that local police are efficient said that New York policemen draw about $540 a year more than local officers. Base pay here is $3043 yearly.

He said authorities have agreed that a community should average three policemen per 1000 population while in the District there are but 2.3 per 1000.

Davis, who said his staff would be set up next week for the investigation, cited Washington Criminal Justice Association figures as showing that felonies here had risen from 6159 in 1946 to 13,029 in 1948.

Laborer Freed As Suspect in Boy's Murder

A 48-year-old construction laborer, held as a suspect in the brutal sex-murder on October 9 of Harrison McKinley Walker in Rock Creek park, was released by police yesterday.

Officers said the man was picked up Saturday when they learned that he was an acquaintance of the boy's mother and had threatened the lad with punishment if he did not stay out of the park. Investigation, police said, failed to show any connection between the suspect and the crime.

2 Women Die After Cars Crash

A mother of seven children was one of two women killed yesterday in a two-car collision on Route 55 near Marshall in Fauquier County, Va., 47 miles west of Washington.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Garfield Hospital last night was Mrs. Louise Brown of 229 E. Beacon Hill rd., Groveton, Va. Mary Penn, 22, of Route 2, Warrenton, Va., died from head and internal injuries at Freedmen's Hospital at 9:45 p. m.

Miss Penn's niece, Mary Jane Mann, 16, of the Warrenton address, who was riding with her, was admitted to Freedman's Hospital with head injuries.

David Brown, 29, of Baltimore, stepson of Mrs. Brown, and driver of the car in which she was killed, was treated for head cuts in a Warrenton hospital.

According to Deputy Sheriff J. K. James, of Fauquier County, the Browns were driving eastbound on Route 55 when their car collided with the other auto which was leaving a driveway. The Penn car overturned after the collision, James said.

A friend of the Browns said Mrs. Brown and her stepson had driven her father, T. H. Robinson, to his home in Harrisonburg, and were returning to Groveton when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Brown was the wife of I. G. Brown, a Naval Gun Factory employe.

High Praise Paid Nisei at Arlington

No one can ever evaluate what America owes to the loyalty, bravery and devotion to duty of Americans of Japanese descent, Col. Sidney F. Mashbir, USA, said yesterday.

Colonel Mashbir, expert on Japan and first American officer to enter Tokyo after World War II, spoke at a memorial service for Japanese-Americans who gave their lives in war service.

The service, held before the rain-soaked graves of the first two Nisei to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery, was sponsored by the Japanese-American Citizens League and was attended by some 75 persons.

It marked the first Nisei Soldier Memorial Day, which will be observed annually.

Colonel Mashbir, who is now executive officer of the Army Adjutant General office, declared it would be impossible to determine how many hundreds of American lives and how many billions of dollars were saved due to the intelligence supplied by the Nisei in the ATIS.

Colonel Mashbir said he was sure that the future conduct of the Nisei will be equally glorious.

Jack Hirose Washington artist and chairman of the program, explained that October 30 had been selected by the JACL for the annual Nisei memorial day because on that date five years ago, the Nisei troops of the 442d Regimental Combat Team had rescued from a German trap the battered remnants of the lost Texas Battalion.

A member of the 442d, Mike Masaoka, national legislative director of the JACL anti-discrimination committee, recalled that the Nisei combat team effected the rescue in the Vosges Mountains of France at a cost of 1000 casualties, including 200 killed. The battle was waged for seven days and included one of the few bayonet charges of the war, he said.

Mrs. Gladys Shimasaki, whose brother, Lloyd Onoye, is buried in Arlington Cemetery, read a message from Gen. George C. Marshall, wartime Chief of Staff, honoring the Nisei for their "distinguished combat record."

Trick or Treaters Raise $100 For CARE, Soap for Germany

Washington youngsters turned the traditional Halloween "trick or treat" caper into a charitable enterprise in at least two instances over the weekend.

In one version of enlightened Halloween beggary, costumed McLean Gardens children "begged" more than $100 from apartment residents yesterday. They'll convert the money into CARE food packages for needy foreign children.

The money was still rolling in late last night, Mrs. Arthur F. North, of 3821 39th st. nw., in charge of the project, reported. About 75 youngsters, supervised by a dozen mothers, took part.

In the Chevy Chase area, the Hearthstones, junior high school group of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, collected 700 bars of soap and boxes of soap powder which they'll ship to Darmstadt, Germany.

News of the "trick or soap" project evoked invitations for the Hearthstones to canvass a wider area. They'll be out again this evening in the Chevy Chase area, but project officials suggest that other areas have their own children join in the soap collection. Further information may be had by calling the church today at Emerson 5466.

Span Asked At Mass. Ave

fewer people in the area will drive cars by 1980 than the Highway Department believes.

Applying its revised population figures, NCPPC came up with an increase in automobile registration of only 100 percent by 1980 as against the Highway Department's 200 percent in the area.

"The significance of the materially smaller estimated increase in future registration, especially in the District," NCPPC concludes, "is that it casts doubt on the need for the two bridges which the Highway Department recommends, namely, one now at E. Capitol st., and in about 10 years another between 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave.

"With the lesser traffic volumes, all that seems necessary in the southern section is one new bridge at Massachusetts ave. halfway between the proposed two bridges."

Three Points Offered

Supporting the Massachusetts ave. location, NCPPC hit on these three points:

A study of the highway plan in the District and its connections with main southern Maryland roads show that the principal routes (Marlboro Road and Route 5, Branch ave.) and many other roads in a wide sector funnel to the Massachusetts ave. bridge.

These channeling routes intercept principal Maryland feeders of the Pennsylvania ave. and Benning bridges. Thus it is "evident" that a bridge at Massachusetts is "better situated" to relieve both these existing bridges, and:

The Massachusetts ave. bridge would lead to the same point on the District side of the river as would the proposed E. Capitol st. span.

Pointing to the "adverse ramifications" of the E. Capitol street location, NCPPC said, in summary, that its "realistic alternatives" offer "a practical solution to all the problems that the E. Capitol st. bridge fails to resolve—and for roughly the same cost."

NCPPC recommended that the Highway Department recompute the allocation of future cross-river traffic on the basis of its alternative bridge plan, using its revised population and registration estimates and giving "due weight" to the long-range Thorofare Plan.

The two District agencies will seek to formally resolve their bridge differences at the December meeting of NCPPC. Should they fail then or later, to get to passed on to Congress for arbitration.

VANDERB

WHILE everyone else was skipping around to a lively square dance at the Jango party last Thursday at Fort McNair, Miss Virginia Larkin and her fiance, Hugh McCann, Counselor of the Irish Legation, were in a romantic world all their own. The pretty brunette daughter of Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin was wearing her brand-new engagement ring of two matched diamonds in an old-fashioned Tiffany setting.

MORE than 100 Jangoes, their "dates" and their guests turned out for an old-fashioned square dance last Thursday in the Officers' Club at Fort Leslie J. McNair. The main ballroom of the club rocked to the rhythm of "Down the Center," "Red River Gale," "Swing on the Garden Gate," "Dive for the Oysters," etc. The caller, Wylie Goodsell, and his small troop played until the very early hours of the morning to the enthusiastic dancers. Most of the modern '49ers came in hill billy outfits of plaid shirts, blue jeans and gingham dresses. Guests were greeted at the door by weird looking Halloween characters in rubber masks. Skeletons and other decorations in the Halloween colors adorned the walls. The party, which was the first big social of the season for the Junior Army Navy Guild Organization, was such a whopping success that members are talking about launching a series of square dances. Mrs. George Hinman was chairman of the party and Mrs. James H. Dallman and Miss Patricia O'Neill headed the decorations committee.

Alice Estill, Major Johnson to Wed

By Marie McNair

ALICE KING ESTILL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gentry Estill of Glen Eden Place, Estill, Mo., and Maj. Floyd Myron Johnson, jr., USMC, have planned their wedding for December.

They broke the happy news of their engagement to their Washington friends at a party given by Miss Estill's uncle and aunt, Maj. Gen. Joseph Dorst Patch, USA (retired) and Mrs. Patch, at the Washington Club.

The bride-elect is the great-granddaughter of the late Capt. Richard King, founder of the fabulous King Ranch in Texas. She's a graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism and recently returned from Europe, where she spent five months visiting Marshall Plan countries. The results of her survey appeared in a series of articles in the Richmond Times Dispatch.

Five years with the Wall Street Journal, Miss Estill served in both the New York and Washington bureaus and for a year was on the staff of the American Red Cross public information department in Washington. She is a member of the Women's National Red Cross Club and a former officer of the club and a member of Theta Sigma Phi honorary journalism fraternity.

Major Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Johnson of Albany, Tex., saw active service with a Marine raider battalion and the Fourth Marines in the Pacific theater during the war. Later he was three years on recruiting duty in San Antonio, and is now on the staff of the Marine Corps school at Quantico, Va.

THE four Spanish classes which have been meeting for seven years in the apartment of Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin at the Shoreham will transfer their activities to the Mexican Embassy for the month of November through the courtesy of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina. Wednesday the intermediate class will meet in the morning, the beginners' class that afternoon. The advanced class on Thursday morning will be followed by the second semester on Thursday afternoon. Prof. Ramon Ramos will be there as usual.

NEWS NOTES: Arriving on Wednesday for a week's stay in Washington is Mme. Constantine Tsaldaris, wife of the Vice Premier of Greece, who will be a guest of Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador. Mme. Tsaldaris is spending the winter in New York, where her husband heads the Greek delegation to U. N.

An ECA official looking down from his office window to the Truxtun Beale house across the street saw a sign, "Naval Museum" on the side wall. "Wonder if that's where they're going to put what's left of the Navy," he mused.

Mrs. Norman Makin, wife of the Australian Ambassador, will receive the prize-winning orchids from the National Orchid Exhibit this afternoon at the embassy. The blooms, judged the finest in the display, were grown by H. A. Dilling of Sydney, and were entered by the British Commonwealth Pacific Airline in the airlines class.

The big house at 2941 Massachusetts ave., owned by Prince Pignatelli, has been sold, but the name of the purchaser is all very hush-hush for the nonce.

DATE-BOOK DATA Col. and Mrs. James Hunter Drum have sent out cards for cocktails on Tuesday, November 8, at their home on Rodman st.

Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, USN (retired) will entertain at a cocktail party Tuesday afternoon at his home on Foxhall rd.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Barr Comstock of this city. She was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, jr., of Wayne, Pa. Clifford E. Roberts served as best man.

Mrs. Ward served with the Office of Strategic Services in the Mediterranean and European areas during the war. She was graduated from Winsor School and attended Radcliffe College. The bridegroom, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, served during the war as a technical adviser to the Ninth Air Force bomber command.

Bride-to-Be Feted; Gen. Brooks Host

Another party for Miss Adelina Sopella and Maj. Jerre Boggs, before their wedding next Saturday, was given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Jean Guy Marcouyeux and the latter's brother, Andre Kahn.

Headed by Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley, guests at Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Edward H. Brooks' party yesterday included other officers on the post and their wives. This was the first in a series of teas which General and Mrs. Brooks will give at their quarters at Fort Myer.

Examine Storm Fittings

The time has come to look over storm doors and windows and see what should be done to make them efficient. Perhaps they need painting, the hinges certainly need oiling, and maybe the door would fit better if it had weather stripping tacked on top and bottom. Any method that keeps out the cold is a real fuel saver.

Ask Anne — About Heat Discoloration

How can I get rid of the blue discoloration of the chrome centerpiece of the heating element on my new electric range?
W. D. J.

I know of no way to take off this discoloration. Such discoloration is caused by the intense heat, is not a surface discoloration and therefore is not removable.

Something very hot was placed on my dining room table and a circle of green felt from the table pads came off onto the mahogany table. Can you tell me how to remove this ring of felt without harming the rest of the table's finish?
S. J. S.

It may be that you can remove this blemish if you will rub it with powdered pumice or rottenstone and oil. This can be purchased at hardware stores and is applied by dampening a cloth with light oil and touching it to the powdered pumice. Rub with the grain of the wood and take care not to get the pumice into the area surrounding the felt. If the felt is just stuck to the top of the finish, this should remove it. If it doesn't, the heat probably penetrated the finish and a complete refinishing job will be necessary to remove it.

If the treatment completely removes the felt, wipe the surface with oil and then go over the entire table top with a good furniture polish.

I am going to be a mother sometime before the end of this month and I would like some advice on the proper method of washing baby clothes. I have some kimonos and nighties which are made of flannel, some of combed cotton, and two printed rayon kimonos which are lined with flannel. I want to keep the white things as white as possible, of course. Is there any preference between soap and one of the soapless detergents? Is there anything I can wash safely in the automatic washer, or will I have to wash everything by hand? How about the cotton receiving blankets; can they go in the washer? Will I need to soak the clothes before laundering, and, if so, in what? I also have some felt rubber sheeting (covered on both sides with felt) I plan to use in the crib. How do I wash this? I am going to have diaper-wash service, but how do I wash the occasional diapers of my own?
E. H. O.

All of the cottons including your flannel and combed cotton kimonos and receiving blankets can go right into your automatic washer.

The printed rayon kimonos will stay fresh and new looking longer if they are washed by hand in lukewarm water with gentle soap.

You can use any of the mild soaps or detergents. Since automatic washers do such a complete and thorough washing and rinsing job you should have no trouble with the garments not staying white. If, however, they should become dingy, add a little bleach to the washing water, or, better still, let the clothes soak for 15 minutes before washing in cold water to which bleach has been added. Use about a cup of bleach to a wash tub full of water. By soaking in bleach before the washing, you can be sure that every trace of bleach will be removed from the clothes.

Most rubber-felt sheeting can be washed in the machine, but use the setting for warm water.

Diapers should be rinsed out immediately, if necessary, and then given a preliminary soaking in cold water just before washing.

Skilled Counselors Seek Causes of Divorce

This is the first in a series of six articles on problems connected with marriage.

By Gerald W. Johnson

"BUT, DAD, this girl is not like the rest. This girl is different."

When Junior springs that line—and did any Junior ever fail to spring it?—Dad is a whipped man.

He may not know it, but from that moment Dad is what is technically called a gone gosling. The longer he struggles, the worse will be his final defeat.

Dad's position is hopeless because the flat truth is that Junior is right. The gal really is different, although not in any way that Dad can perceive.

To him she is just the latest unit off the assembly line, carrying the standard equipment built into a million others, very neat and new and shiny. But she is as indistinguishable from the ones on either side of her as the middle one of three new Fords is from the other two.

Oh, she has a different name, to be sure, just as a new car has a different license plate. But that doesn't make it different.

All the same, this one is different. She is the one who has spurred Junior into taking a dive off the deep end, which none of the others could do.

Dad can take it from Junior that is a whale of a difference, from his standpoint the biggest difference in the world. In this matter, it is Junior's standpoint that counts.

It's the Common Fate

SO IT COMES to pass that Dad, who should be the best, is frequently the worst consultant for Junior when he reaches that odd, yet normal, stage in his development at which every noise, from a fire siren to a flat-wheeled streetcar, sounds like wedding bells in his ears.

All because one out of a million young women has suddenly acquired a radiance so dazzling to his eyes that he cannot believe others do not see it at all.

But it happens, every day in the year and everywhere in the world.

Dad won't see the main point because he can't see it; and Junior sees it so plainly that he can't observe anything else. So Junior suspects Dad of being a crank, and Dad suspects Junior of being a sap. Both lose their tempers and everybody is made miserable to no purpose and for no sound reason.

This situation is one of the reasons for the rise of a new specialty among sociologists and psychologists—that of marriage counselor. It is an important reason, although it is not the principal one.

The chief reason is the increasing frequency with which marriage as an institution fails, a frequency revealed, but not fully measured, by the divorce rate.

The Deeper Misunderstanding

A MISUNDERSTANDING between Dad and Junior is bad. But far worse is a husband-and-wife misunderstanding between Junior and The Girl Who Was Different.

In about one marriage out of six the misunderstanding leads to the divorce court. People are shocked and there is much ado.

Theologians thunder from the pulpit, judges from the bench, legislators pass laws by the dozen, the score, the hundred, all aiming at the divorce evil; yet divorces constantly increase in number.

The point is that divorce is not the evil that threatens the institution of marriage any more than death is the disease that threatens a sick man's life.

Had Origin in Europe

THIS IS the field of the marriage counselor, a specialty first developed in Europe and brought to this country within the memory of people as yet in early middle age.

Two of the American pioneers in this work were Dr. Ernest R. Groves and his wife, born Gladys Hoagland, like her husband, a sociologist. They were by no means the only ones, but their experience is fairly typical, and shows the way in which the work developed.

For it was not a sudden inspiration. It grew naturally out of the experience of people trying to understand the confused and difficult problem of family relationships, one of the primary tasks of sociology.

The late Dr. Groves—he died in 1946—set up the first university course in preparation for marriage for students at the University of North Carolina, where he was a professor of sociology. He did it at the demand of students.

In 1927, long before the GI bill of rights, few university students were married; but it was not long before the Groves collaborators, husband and wife, were bombarded with questions from people already married.

Work Now Nation-wide

IT SOON became necessary to organize the work, and the outcome was the establishment of regular clinics for the treatment of ailing marriages.

This was neither psychiatry nor psychology, although both sciences were heavily involved.

It was a specialty of its own. It has now spread all over the country and has its own organization, the American Association of Marriage Counselors.

Girl Scouts to Meet Here This Week

Over 13,000 Girl Scouts in the Washington area are joining with their million sister scouts throughout the United States in the observance of Girl Scout Week. The observance traditionally takes place during the week of October 31, the birthday anniversary of the founder of Girl Scouting in this country, Juliette Gordon Low.

The theme for this year's Girl Scout Week is "Come Along With Us," a slogan designed to emphasize the universal appeal of Girl Scouting which is one of the Red Feather organizations.

Highlight of the week-long celebration in Washington will take place Saturday when the Senior Girl Scouts of Washington and surrounding area will attend an all-day conference at the National Airport. These girls will listen to lectures on vocational possibilities. Among the leaders participating in this Vocational Exploration Conference is Bill Gold of The Washington Post, Margaret O'Donahue, president of the D. C. Group Workers; Barbara Dirks, Friends School; Catherine Everett, Miners Teachers College; Dr. Irene Bassett and Rebecca Collingwood who will discuss medicine and nursing. The morning session will be lead by Mrs. Robert Leonard.

Other events of interest will be an exhibit to run through Wednesday at East Washington Heights Baptist Church of special scout activities and skills, and a community open house Saturday to be held by Glen Echo troops.

A special phase of scouting is to be stressed each day of this week. Starting with a day of worship on Sunday, the phases are: Monday, homemaking; Tuesday, citizenship; Wednesday, health and safety; Thursday, international friendship; Friday, arts and crafts; Saturday, out of doors.

Priest Assails Ministerial Association

The Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Stephens of Alexandria yesterday condemned the Alexandria Ministerial Association for sponsoring a lecture by Paul Blanshard critical of Catholicism.

Msgr. Stephens, pastor of St. Mary's Church and dean, or vicar forane, of northern Virginia with authority over some 20 parishes, asserted Blanshard's talk "added nothing new to the attacks that have been hurled at the Catholic Church in the past," but "reached a new low in foul invective and divisive attack."

Blanshard, author of the highly controversial book, "American Freedom and Catholic Power," spoke Friday night at a "religious liberty rally" sponsored jointly by the Alexandria Ministerial Association and Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

Philosophy Attacked

Blanshard, who spoke at the Washington Street Methodist Church, said the Roman Catholic philosophy is fundamentally un-American, and criticized its teachings with respect to education, marriage, birth control, medical practice, and its position on parochial school support.

Msgr. Stephens said, "it is most unfortunate that the Ministerial Association of Alexander selected this time of Community Chest endeavor to impress upon the citizens of Alexandria that between 12,000 and 15,000 of its fellow Americans are un-American.

"It is interesting to observe," he said, "that some of those very ministers who unfortunately lent their presence and the prestige of their ministry and of their congregations to foster this un-American blast on the part of Paul Blanshard, are the very ones who prate 'Brotherhood' in February and snipe and hurl foul invective against the Church of Christ in October."

(Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, is held in February and marked by many interfaith activities.)

Small Attendance

Msgr. Stephens said, "It is a splendid tribute to the Protestant laithy of Alexandria that only 122 were present to partake of this unwarranted attack upon the Catholic Church. We sympathize with them in the fact that their paid ministerial leaders so forgot the human decencies of Christian charity to descend to such depths."

"Mr. Blanshard fears that the teachings of the church and her school system may split American life. Strict adherence to the teachings of Christ is the best means of preserving American life. It is in those countries where political philosophies have become a religion that human liberties are denied and the dignity of man stamped upon."

Play Set in Fairfax

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 8469, Fairfax, Va., will present a play, "Laff It Off," Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m. in the Fairfax High School auditorium. Proceeds will go to the Boy and Girl Scouts and Boys Club organizations of the town.

Faith Service

2000 Hear Appeal for Evangelism

Washington Protestants last night heard a plea for a "great program of vital evangelism" at their annual Reformation Day "Festival of Faith" at Constitution Hall.

More than 2000 persons attended the service, which was sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches. Many of the city's Protestant churches dispensed with regular Sunday evening services so that their members could attend the festival.

Speaking at the meeting, the Rev. Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, pastor of First Baptist Church, Syracuse, N. Y., hailed the Reformation Day service as a sign of the "resurgence of the spirit and power of Protestantism and a revival of a free faith in a free society."

Cites Churches' Duties

Churches today, regardless of denomination, should "take religion out on the streets and highways" in an effort to win people to the Son of God, he said.

Picturing the need for evangelistic work by the churches, he declared that "nations are lost, businessmen lost, labor unions lost, schools and colleges lost, and even ministers of the Christian gospel lost" because the challenges of Christianity are not presented to them.

The Baptist clergyman, who is also a member of the central committee of the World Council of Churches and chairman of the department of evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches, also called for an expanded program of Christian education.

Must Help Children

Pointing to the record number of children about to enter the nation's schools, he declared that "if the church of Jesus Christ does not claim them, there are plenty of other agencies in the world that will.

The churches must also present a united front against the evils of the time, Dr. Dahlberg said, stressing the "tremendous power for spiritual good if we would all stand together in our Protestant faith."

"Much as we depend upon Atomic Energy Commissions, United Nations, and Trades Union Congresses to implement the desire of the people with regard to world peace," he said, "it is certain that none of these will succeed in their purpose without the divine spirit and power present at the table of our Lord."

Young people from the city's churches carried the flags of member nations of the United Nations in the opening procession, and the choir of Washington Lee High School sang at the service.

International Bank Reveals Gain in Net

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday reported a net profit of $3,162,980 for the three months ended September 30. The figure compared with a net profit of $2,317,723 for the corresponding quarter of 1948.

Gross income for the quarter was $7,315,697 as compared with $6,292,023 a year ago. In accordance with its Articles of Agreement, the bank allocated $1,335,594 to a special reserve. This compared with $1,206,311 in the same period a year ago. Administrative expenses totaled $1,104,863 as compared with $1,055,765. Interest payable on bonds of $1,712,224 was the same in both periods.

The net profit for the period brought the total net excess of income over expenses since the bank began operations to $16,804,074, exclusive of $9,409,734 accumulated in the special reserve. During the quarter, the bank approved five loans which increased total loan commitments from $650,100,000 to $726,600,000.

The loans were two to India totaling 44 million dollars; 15 million dollars to the Hertelbank in the Netherlands; $12,500,000 to Finland, and five million dollars to Colombia.

Disbursements on loans during the quarter amounted to $15,149,903, making a total of loan disbursements to September 30, 1949, of $541,440,917. There remained $136,159,083 to be disbursed on loans then in effect.

During the quarter, Denmark became the fourth country to make available to the bank for lending purposes a part of its recent currency subscription. Denmark made the equivalent of $125,000 in Danish kroner available to the bank.

Other countries which have made a part of their 18 percent subscription available for lending are Canada, Belgium, and the United Kingdom.

Pastor Asks End To Controversies On Religion

Protestants and Catholics should handle separation of church and State and other controversial issues in a spirit of Christian love and understanding, the Rev. Newton Gordon Cosby declared yesterday.

In a Reformation Sunday sermon at the Ecumenical Church of the Saviour, 1707 19th st. nw., Mr. Cosby, pastor, declared that "we should deal with the issues, but never attack the church or the people as such."

At the close of the service, Mr. Cosby asked his congregation to pray that Catholics and Protestants eventually will be drawn closer together spiritually.

Reds Would Win Finally

Fascist-Communist Civil War Is Predicted In Japan if U. S. Withholds Food, Troops

(Last of a Series)

Tokyo (NYHT).—Only the presence of ample American food supplies and United States armed forces under able command is keeping over-populated Japan today from such a massacre as might make birth control unnecessary for a generation.

There would be civil war here immediately were American food and troops withdrawn. It would be a repetition of that naked struggle between fascism and communism which brought Hitler, Mussolini and Franco to power in Europe in the 1930s.

No doubt the Fascists would also be victorious here in the early days of revolution. The thinking of the Japanese masses is profoundly conservative and nationalist. Leaders of the right have all the local prestige that goes with ownership of most of the country's resources and the custody of its graveyard shrines. At the outset they would be overwhelmingly superior to their foes in organizational experience, technical skills, military weapons and the number of their personal followers.

Reds Would Win

But, granted the continued absence of American food and troops, the revolution which is now being provoked by a fanatical little band of about 150,000 Communist Party members, out of Japan's 82,000,000 population, would inevitably be won by the Reds with Russian and Chinese backing. Some dictator closely allied with Mao Tse-tung in China would rise to absolute rule here, riding the crest of starvation and chaos.

On October 10, 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, as Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, opened the doors of Japanese prisons to all political prisoners. He acted as a soldier under orders. Sixteen of the most active Communist Party leaders in Japan today walked free.

Among them were Kyuichi Tokuda, secretary general of the party, and Yoshio Shiga, one of the ablest of its executive committee. Tokuda is the greatest of Japanese rabble-rousers. Sanzo Nosaka, believed by many to be the brains of the executive committee and Politburo, arrived in Japan a little later. He came from Russia by way of Yenan, Communist capital of North China, where he had been training deserters from the Japanese army to fight against their country.

These men, with a few others, can throw 500,000 followers into the public squares of Tokyo on a few hours' notice, all singing the "Internationale" and dead ripe for rioting.

Yet numerically the rise in the party's membership in Japan may be tabulated as 8000 dues-paying members in 1946, 80,000 in 1947, 100,000 in 1948 and about 150,000 in 1949. There will be more in 1950 because of the return of thoroughly indoctrinated prisoners of war from Manchuria.

The political influence of the party, of course, is far greater than its membership. Communist Party candidates for Parliament received 2,135,757 votes in the 1946 elections, or 3.8 percent of all votes cast. In 1947 they received only 1,002,883 votes, but this was 3.7 percent of all cast. In 1949 they received 2,984,583 votes, and this was 9.6 percent of votes cast. The Communists elected five members of the Diet in 1946, four in 1947, and 35 in 1949.

This rise in Communist prestige reflects in part American failure to grapple either frankly or effectively with two of the most important economic problems of the country: trade with the sterling areas and the soft-currency areas of Asia and revival of Japanese shipping. (This country has water all around it.) Communist growth reflects partly disgust of many Japanese with postwar experiments in parliamentary self-government, which have been characterized by wholesale corruption of legislators and scenes of drunken disorder in the halls of the Diet.

Russia's Staff Numbers 450

How far the Russian mission in Tokyo has helped in the rise of its Communist allies here is a secret locked securely thus far in General MacArthur's intelligence files and the equally secret files of co-conspirators. The mission has maintained about 450 persons here since 1946. MacMrthur has stopped its spokesmen short in their efforts to use the Allied Council as a propaganda platform, by putting the council out of business.

The Communist Party here is obviously supplied with large funds. The party claims to exist upon 1 percent of its members' wages, about $27,750 a month, plus income from "The Red Flag" and other publications and donations of sympathizers.

Evidence, in General MacArthur's headquarters indicate the Communists are up to their necks in selling santonin, a drug used by the Japanese for dietary ailments, ingredients of which come normally from Communist North China.

Organizational techniques are exactly the same as in the United States. It has groups of tireless agitators, linked by discipline in most of the labor unions, schools and colleges, organizations of theatrical and news workers, and the peasant farmers in districts of direct poverty.

MacArthur Thwarts Riots

Communist efforts at riot or insurrection, under the guise of strike or demonstration, have been stopped again and again either by General MacArthur or his subordinates.

One of the most effective means used by the American Army to discourage the growth of communism or even radicalism in Japan is the imprisonment, after military trial, of any political agitator whose remarks may be construed as critical of the Allied occupation, which governs the country at a higher level than the Yoshida government.

Another effective means, apparently, of coping with radical dissent against the ruling powers of Japan which is necessary to any rise of communism is the post-publication censorship of all Japanese publications. This makes Japanese editors extremely wary of publishing anything which might be construed as critical of the occupation.

How long the American people can bar communism from Japan by conducting a military dictatorship over its 80 million people through years of supposed peace remains to be seen. Conceding that a "cold war" is being fought here and no peace treaty is yet written, this policy of repression plus generous food supply is doubtless justified. But this correspondent doubts if it will work very long. It will have to yield gradually to something better as th people who get food increase from 82 to 90 million and then to 100 million.

The United States will either do much more than it yet has done to solve Japan's economic problems; sponsor and protect a government which will become increasingly Fascist; or get out. To bar communism and Russia, it will have to stay.

Certain Cancer Types Shrunk by Hormones

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 30—A discovery that two new hormones can shrink certain types of cancer was reported to the American Cancer Society today.

How long the shrinkage may last is unknown. But these hormones appear to have opened a new field of medicine.

The hormones are the same which earlier this year were discovered to give dramatic relief in arthritis, gout and rheumatic fever. They are cortisone and acth, the first a product of the adrenal glands in your back, the second the governor of those glands.

The cancer report was made by Drs. O. H. Pearson, L. P. Eliel, Rulon W. Rawson, Konrad Dobriner and C. P. Rhoads, of the Sloan-Kettering Institute and Department of Medicine of Memorial Cancer Center, New York.

They said the cancers were not cured and that it remains to be seen whether complete cures can be obtained. Eight persons were given the hormones. One with breast cancer and one with cancer of the prostate showed no visible improvement.

The other six had lymphoid tumors, which means cancers affecting lymph glands in various ways. The report says there was dramatic and progressive decrease in size in all six. The decreases were in enlarged lymph nodes and spleens.

Four of these had one of the common forms of leukemia, known as chronic lymphatic leukemia and often called blood cancer. One had Hodgkins disease and the sixth a growth known as lymphosarcoma.

None of the six was in dying condition. In two the cancers have remained shrunken for 10 weeks. In the others the cancers started enlarging again, but now show signs of shrinking with a second course of hormones. This two-time good effect is unusual in cancer.

The physicians said they used these hormones because they offer a new way to understand the mysterious mechanics of cancer. They said in leukemia it is like being able to turn the disease on and off at will.

"This is probably the greatest thing in medicine since Pasteur's discovery of bacteria," said Dr. J. R. Mote, medical director of Armour & Co., Chicago, makers of acth.

"It means that a broad new area in medicine has been uncovered. This is the discovery that adrenal glands can affect disease, as shown by arthritis, gout, rheumatic fever and cancer experiments."

Before the report was made physicians discussed whether to suppress it to save the public from misunderstanding and distress.

Two reasons were given. One, that these hormones are not a treatment. Two, that they are so scarce that only a few persons could be treated, even if the hormones cured cancer or any other disease.

It takes the pituitary glands of 400,000 hogs to make one pound of acth, which would treat less than 150 persons for a month on the minimum doses so far tried. It takes the bile of 40 cattle to make one day's dose of cortisone. Many pharmaceutical companies are trying to discover faster production. The cancer experiments are going on in two other cities, but on as small a scale as New York.

Another drawback is that after a month or so these hormones may cause a serious disease known as Cushing's syndrome. This includes water retention, severe nerve upsets, faces getting a moonlike look, buffalo neck, which is a hump of flesh on the back of the neck, higher blood pressure, beards on women and more sugar troubles for diabetics.

Schneider Plays Bach In Fine Taste

By Richard Keith

The annual Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Founder's Day concert was given last night at the Library of Congress by Alexander Schneider, violinist, in honor of Mrs. Coolidge's birthday.

Schneider performed the first three sonatas and partitas for solo violin by J. S. Bach. The remaining three will be played tonight at the Coolidge Auditorium.

The performance of all six of these difficult and intellectually taxing works in two successive recitals is a stupendous feat in itself. It might be added that it is also a stupendous feat on the part of a listener to keep his mind on such a concentrated dose of such specialized music. Only the most zealous votary would set out to perform the task, and only the most devoted Bach worshipers would be able to appreciate it.

Schneider played last night with his accustomed fine taste and phenomenal skill. The contrapuntal texture, which makes these works so difficult, was clearly defined throughout. His tempos were reasonable and his tone full-bodied, giving the effect much of the time of not one, but several, violins. His breath-taking acrobatics in the Presto Double of the B minor Partita brought an enthusiastic response from the audience.

In spite of the high plane on which this achievement lies, it is still faintly reminiscent of the goldfish-swallowing fad of a while back. The effect on the listener is that of having roast beef not only as an entree but also as an appetizer and dessert.

B-1 Shortage In Diet Held Brain Danger

San Francisco, Oct. 30 (AP).—Experiments indicating that a shortage of vitamin B-1 in the diet can cause extensive damage to the brain were reported today by three University of California medical researchers.

Monkeys repeatedly deprived of the vitamin were found to have degeneration in brain centers called basal ganglia, or nerve tissue. Often they are involved in cases of shaking palsy.

The experiments were done by Dr. James F. Rinehart, Dr. Louis D. Greenberg and Melvin Friedman, and reported in the Archives of Pathology, a medical journal.

Curiously, the researchers found no sign of neuritis in the test monkeys. Neuritis is an inflammation of the nerves. It has long been associated with a deficiency of Vitamin B-1 in the diet. The vitamin has been prescribed widely as a remedy.

Dr. Rinehart said this indicates neuritis is due to a deficiency of more than one vitamin or other dietary factor.

What's the Verdict?

DUE PROCESS

Q. An Ohio broadcaster was granted a license by the FCC to operate a station on 1530 kilocycles, with power of 50 kilowatts, unlimited time. Later a New York broadcaster petitioned to operate, in New York, on 1530 kelocycles, with power of 10 kilowatts, daytime only. The New York petition said such a station would not cause objectionable interference with any existing station. The Ohio company opposed the New York petition, saying such New York broadcasts would interfere with the Ohio broadcasts a couple of hours a day. The FCC granted the New York application without a hearing. Is this lawful?

A. Although the FCC, and other Federal regulatory bodies, have the public interest as their primary objective, they must give due consideration to the private interests involved. Here, the Ohio company had a right to broadcast on a certain frequency, all day, at a certain power. The New York broadcast would diminish the effectiveness of the Ohio broadcast. The effect of this would be to deprive it of some of the worth of its property. This may not be done without a hearing—without "due process of law."

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Then Comes the Second Year

A healthy baby is a delight and joy for most parents. Of course there's diaper-changing and a few other moderately unpleasant things. But all that is overshadowed by a dozen and one pleasant things.

In many a family something happens to this lovely picture along about the time a youngster moves into his second year. He's more interesting, perhaps, but he's likely to be a handful. Earlier, he was generally satisfied to stay in one place. Now he begins to want to run all around the premises. He used to play quietly with a few toys. Now he's curious about books, magazines, bric-a-brac and all sorts of other household treasures. Nor is his curiosity a passive sort of thing. He drags the objects of his interest out of their places. He pulls, hauls, tears, tastes and bangs.

And another change soon becomes evident, too. He wants to do things when he wants to do them and in the way he wants to do them. And he usually wants to do them by himself.

It's a good idea for those parents whose first child is still under a year of age to be prepared for a different sort of life beginning with the second year. It needn't be too bad, but it will call for more patience, more ingenuity and a considerably greater degree of athletic skill just to keep up with him.

Halloween

Tonight each neighborhood will be . . . A bright and merry scene . . . As youngsters gather to observe . . . The festive Halloween . . . In costumes weird or funny they . . . Will hurry down the street . . . To ring the people's doorbells and . . . Announce their "trick or treat" . . . And it will pay the people well . . . To meet each small demand . . . by having candy, cake or gum . . . Or something else on hand . . . So there will be no articles that somehow went astray . . . Or any windows white with soap . . . That must be scraped away . . . Tonight there will be prayers and hopes . . . In every end of town . . . That little will be lost and folks . . . Will keep their tempers down.

Speed Traps Defended By Reader

I have never gotten my ears slapped down as courteously as Mrs. Eleanor Norton of 1230 Crittenden st. nw. does it in a note about speed traps.

After agreeing that it's better to emphasize law enforcement rather than the apprehension of criminals after the law has been broken, Mrs. Norton points out:

"You shouldn't say that speed traps 'outrage our American sense of fair play, and fail to accomplish any worthwhile purpose.'

"A motorist who speeds is not fair when he endangers the lives and property of others. He forfeits his right to complain about what is fair play and what is not.

"As to 'accomplishing a worthwhile purpose,' it's a safe guess that fewer people speed in the vicinity of known speed traps than otherwise. To be sure, this is a negative approach to the problem—but even one accident prevented is well worthwhile."

Mrs. Norton's points are well taken. All I can muster in rebuttal is that I've never been caught in a speed trap and neither have the others who have complained about them.

So we haven't forfeited our right to fair play, and we still feel that the policeman would serve a better purpose if he were to patrol his beat rather than hide in ambush.

SUGGESTION BOX

Mrs. K. C. Johnson of 629 S. Fillmore ave., Arlington, Va., maps out a project for the telephone company's research department. She asks:

"Why can't they work out a gadget that would show when a party line is in use? It would save subscribers endless trips to the phone, and permit those who are talking to finish their conversation without constant interruption."

RHYME TIME

"Nice catchy slogan WTOP has been using," comments Helen Gerson of 3023 14th st. nw. "They say: 'In the Fall hear them all, on CBS!' But Fall will soon be over—and I keep wondering what rhymes with 'Winter'?"

I don't know, Helen, but they've probably assigned a platoon of vice-presidents to the problem and I wouldn't be surprised to find that, come December, we'll be hearing:

"We've got the shows, for when it snows." Or: "The station to remember, for listening in December."

Next April, they might switch to: "We've got the zing, that goes with Spring." Or: "We're the TOP, we must confess; so welcome Spring, on CBS."

By the time the summer replacements come on ("The weather's hot, the shows are not"), the slogan fashioners may have a bit more trouble.

One answer may be to step up the prizes offered on the give-away programs, and keep the summer Hooper ratings high by warning:

An all-expense vacation,
Some cash, a car, a diamond and
A chance to own our station.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

A recent Mary Haworth column has gotten me into a family stew.

It seems that "A. R." wrote of her involvement with "Rand," who is 21 years old.

My name is Rand, and I am 21 years old. But I have no problems, and am not involved with "A. R."

Could you get me a sworn statement that I am not the Rand referred to in the column?

Rand Smith
1426 21st st. nw.

Dear Rand:

You're 21, you have no problems, and people think you're important enough to be the fellow Mary mentioned in her column?

Buddy, you don't know how well off you are. If I were you I'd greet all references to that column with a knowing wink and discreet silence. It'll mark you as quite a lad.

Bill

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Lee Segall, of Dallas' station KIXL, is in N. Y. for a few days, seeing radio executives who approached him about working in Texas—a place they look upon as one providing peace and security. . . . Segall has had many New Yorkers in his employ. And on their first day at the job he always tells his secretary to reserve their return ticket, for 35 days from then. . . . "There are no bars in Dallas, no night life," he explains. "For 30 days the New Yorkers all say, 'Ah, it's so nice and peaceful here.' On the 31st day they start asking: 'Say, what do you do here nights?' And on the 35th day they all leave."

Mrs. India Edwards, head of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, is the one who persuaded Truman to appoint a woman to the District Court judgeship in Washington. She conferred with the President and said: "If you don't appoint a woman to one of the court vacancies, then you might as well tell all the law schools to bar all women." . . . Mrs. Edwards also offered a novel theory on how best to appease the desire of women for recognition in law and politics. "Give them some appointments without making them have to push for the jobs," she said. "Because once women start pushing. . . ."

George Jessel, who flew to N. Y. to attend the Variety Club dinner, visited Producer Max Gordon and told of his absorption in food . . . of the day Gordon came to the home of his stars, carrying a large basket containing smoked salmon, herring, delicatessen and bagels and said: "Here. Can Belasco do that?" . . . On another day Jessel heard Gordon make a dinner date at his sister's house. Later, to decide a political dispute they were having, Gordon telephoned Lord Beaverbrook, Bernard Baruch, Edna Ferber and Arthur Krock. Gordon kept doodling on the memo-pad. Jessel saw the two-word doodle, "Pot Roast."

Joshua Logan, the director and co-author of "Mr. Roberts" and "South Pacific," is a perfectionist in his work: At the first anniversary of "Mr. Roberts" the cast, performing only for their friends, did two scenes which had been cut from the play during the Boston tryouts. These were censorable scenes, and probably won't be performed again until the second anniversary. Logan watched the performances, then told an actor: "Next time, you must read the line this way . . ."

Two U. S. Tax Cases Contrasted

By Drew Pearson

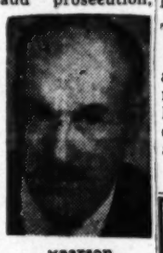
Last week this column told how various big-shot tax-evaders managed to delay or squirm out of criminal tax-fraud prosecution, sometimes because of leniency on the part of politically minded or easy-going U. S. attorneys.



Pearson

It was pointed out that U. S. attorneys are appointed on the recommendations of Senators or Congressmen, and sometimes appear to work more for the Senators than for the Justice Department.

In contrast to the smooth-sailing enjoyed by some big-shot tax-evaders, here is what happened recently to a little fellow who got into a misunderstanding over his taxes. This taxpayer, Francis J. Massey, a displaced Government war worker, found a job as a warehouse worker for Lansburgh & Bros., a Washington department store.

In 1948 Treasury agents checked Massey's tax returns for the war years and found proper returns had been filed and taxes paid, then suddenly it was discovered that a Frank J. Massey had received $150 in dividends from stock owned in the Washington Gas Light Co., and the Treasury promptly assessed Francis J. Massey additional taxes.

Lien on $28 Salary

Actually, Francis J. Massey never owned the stock and never received any dividends. It belonged to his father, now deceased. Edward T. Stafford, secretary of the Washington Gas Light Co., certified that Francis J. Massey never owned the stock and never received the dividends owed to his father, but this made no difference to the U. S. Treasury.

It demanded that he pay just the same. Massey's salary was only $28 a week, and he had a wife and two small children to support. But, under protest, he paid in small driblets of $2 a week up to a total of $18.92. This, however, wasn't fast enough for the treasury and it slapped a tax lien on his salary for the remaining $15.-59.

This got him into trouble with his employer who did not want to be suspected of harboring a tax dodger and he was fired.

Thus, unable to get a recommendation from his last employer—except with a tax-dodging record — Massey was unable to find full-time employment. His youngest child became ill, the family doctor had not been paid for past services and would not come when urgently needed. The child died and was buried in potter's field at government expense.

Finally the office of Deputy Collector J. Ellis Bowen apologized for the mistake, which they said was made in Baltimore. "We promise it won't happen again," Massey was told. "If you are assessed again, just ignore it."

Teapot Dome

On the other hand, here is the experience of a man who had the money to hire lawyers and to live in luxury abroad—one Henry K. Blackmer, multimillionaire oilman who fled to France to escape being questioned in the Teapot Dome scandal.

Some of the others who remained in the United States went to jail for their connection with Teapot Dome and the Continental Trading Company. Albert Fall, Secretary of the Interior in the Harding cabinet, served his sentence. Harry Sinclair served time for refusing to answer the questions of the Senate committee. But Blackmer ducked to France, later was indicted on six counts for perjury and tax evasion to the tune of about $2,000,000.

Blackmer, then president of the Midwest Refining Co., together with Sinclair and Robert Stewart of Standard Oil, formed the Continental Trading Co., which purchased about 7,000,000 barrels of oil for $1.50 a barrel and then sold it to their own companies for $1.75. Sinclair used $230,000 of the profits from this deal to bribe Secretary Fall. Another $180,000 of profits went to the Republican National Committee in the form of Liberty Bonds, and the committee tried to get high-ranking Republicans to exchange the bonds for cash. Andrew Mellon was sent $50,000 of the bonds, but sent them back, accompanied by a gift of $50,000 in cash.

Blackmer's share of the boodle was found in the form of $750,000 in Liberty Bonds in a New York strongbox after he had fled to France.

The Government made various efforts to bring Blackmer home, but the French government refused to extradite him and he remained there.

Last summer, Danny Sullivan, former GOP Colorado politician who dug up the income tax evidence against Blackmer, told friends in Washington:

"Henry Blackmer will never come back to this country while I'm alive."

Tom Walsh's Fight

Sullivan died shortly thereafter, and almost immediately Blackmer's lawyers arranged to bring him back—reportedly with an understanding that he would escape a jail sentence.

Blackmer has powerful friends in the United States, among them GOP Senator Millikin of Colorado, who was a partner in the law firm that originally handled Blackmer's affairs. Millikin, despite a difference in politics, is close to former Senator Ed Johnson, Colorado Democrat, who recommended the appointment of the United States Attorney in Denver, Max Bulkeley.

And it was Bulkeley who informed newsmen in Denver that it would be "inhuman" to send Blackmer to jail.
